FIRST NEWS RECEIVED IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 30.

A telegraphic dispatch has just been received at the War Department from an unofficial source, stating that the rebels left Corinth last night, and that Gen. NELSON occupied their intrenchments at 8 o'clock this morning.

A CORROBORATIVE DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 30.

A dispatch just received at the War Department, fully corroborates the former message that Corinth is evacuated by the rebels and occupied by our troops. Prisoners say the enemy left last night for Okolona, a point about 60 miles south of Corinth, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

(Okolona is a hamlet and post village in Chickasaw County, Miss., situated on the line of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. Its location will be found indicated on our map.)

DISPATCHES FROM BEFORE CORINTH.

BEFORE CORINTH, Thursday, May 29—Midnight.

No additional movements have taken place except picket skirmishing and strengthening our position. Gen. HALLECK has moved his camp two miles forward to-day.

Lieut. WEBB, aid to Gen. DONELSON, was among the prisoners captured yesterday.

CORINTH ASCERTAINED TO BE EVACUATED.

NEAR CORINTH, Friday, May 30.

Gen. POPE's advance, the Thirty-ninth Ohio Regiment, occupied Corinth at 6:40 this morning, and planted our flag on the Court-house.

The enemy evacuated the place last night, retreating down the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

DISPATCHES FROM GEN. HALLECK.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT OF WEDNESDAY.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSISSIPPI, CAMP ON THE CORINTH ROAD, May 28, 1862.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Three strong reconnoitering columns advanced this morning on the right, centre and left, to feel the enemy and unmask his batteries. The enemy hotly contested his ground at each point, but was driven back with considerable loss. The column on the left encountered the strongest opposition. Our loss is twenty-five killed and wounded. The enemy left thirty dead on the field. Our losses at other points are not yet ascertained. Some five or six officers, and a number of privates, were captured.

The fighting will probably be renewed to-morrow at daybreak. The whole country is so thickly wooded that we are compelled to feel our way.

H. W. HALLECK, Major-General.

OPENING OF OUR HEAVY BATTERIES.

NEAR CORINTH, May 30.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Gen. POPE's heavy batteries opened upon the enemy's intrenchments yesterday about 10 A. M., and soon drove the rebels from their advanced batteries.

Maj.-Gen. W. T. SHERMAN established another heavy battery yesterday afternoon, within one thousand yards of their works, and skirmishing parties advanced at daybreak this morning. Three of our divisions are already in the enemy's advanced works, about three-quarters of a mile from Corinth, which is in flames. The enemy has fallen back on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

(Signed) H. W. HALLECK.

THE OCCUPATION OF CORINTH—CONFLICTING REPORTS ABOUT THE ENEMY.

NEAR CORINTH, May 30.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War:

Our advance guard are in Corinth.

Conflicting accounts as to the enemy's movements, but he is believed to be in strong force on our left flank, some four or five miles south of Corinth, near the Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

(Signed) H. W. HALLECK, Major-General.

PARTICULARS OF THE EVACUATION.

HALLECK'S HEADQUARTERS, May 30.

During nearly all of last night the moving of cars and suppressed whistles sounding, betokened some movement going on, but it not being any extraordinary occurrence was not considered of an extraordinary nature.

About 5 o'clock this morning several explosions were distinctly heard. Immediately after skirmishers were thrown out and a general advance commenced.

A large amount of railroad iron was untouched. There being some twelve or fifteen tracks of railroad from the depôt to the intrenchments, with side tracks and switches, they were enabled to move troops with great rapidity.

From all information gleaned from prisoners, it is thought the evacuation commenced at sundown of last night, the enemy retreating in three directions, East, West and South.

BEAUREGARD stated to the citizens last night that he intended evacuating, and to throw himself on both our flanks.

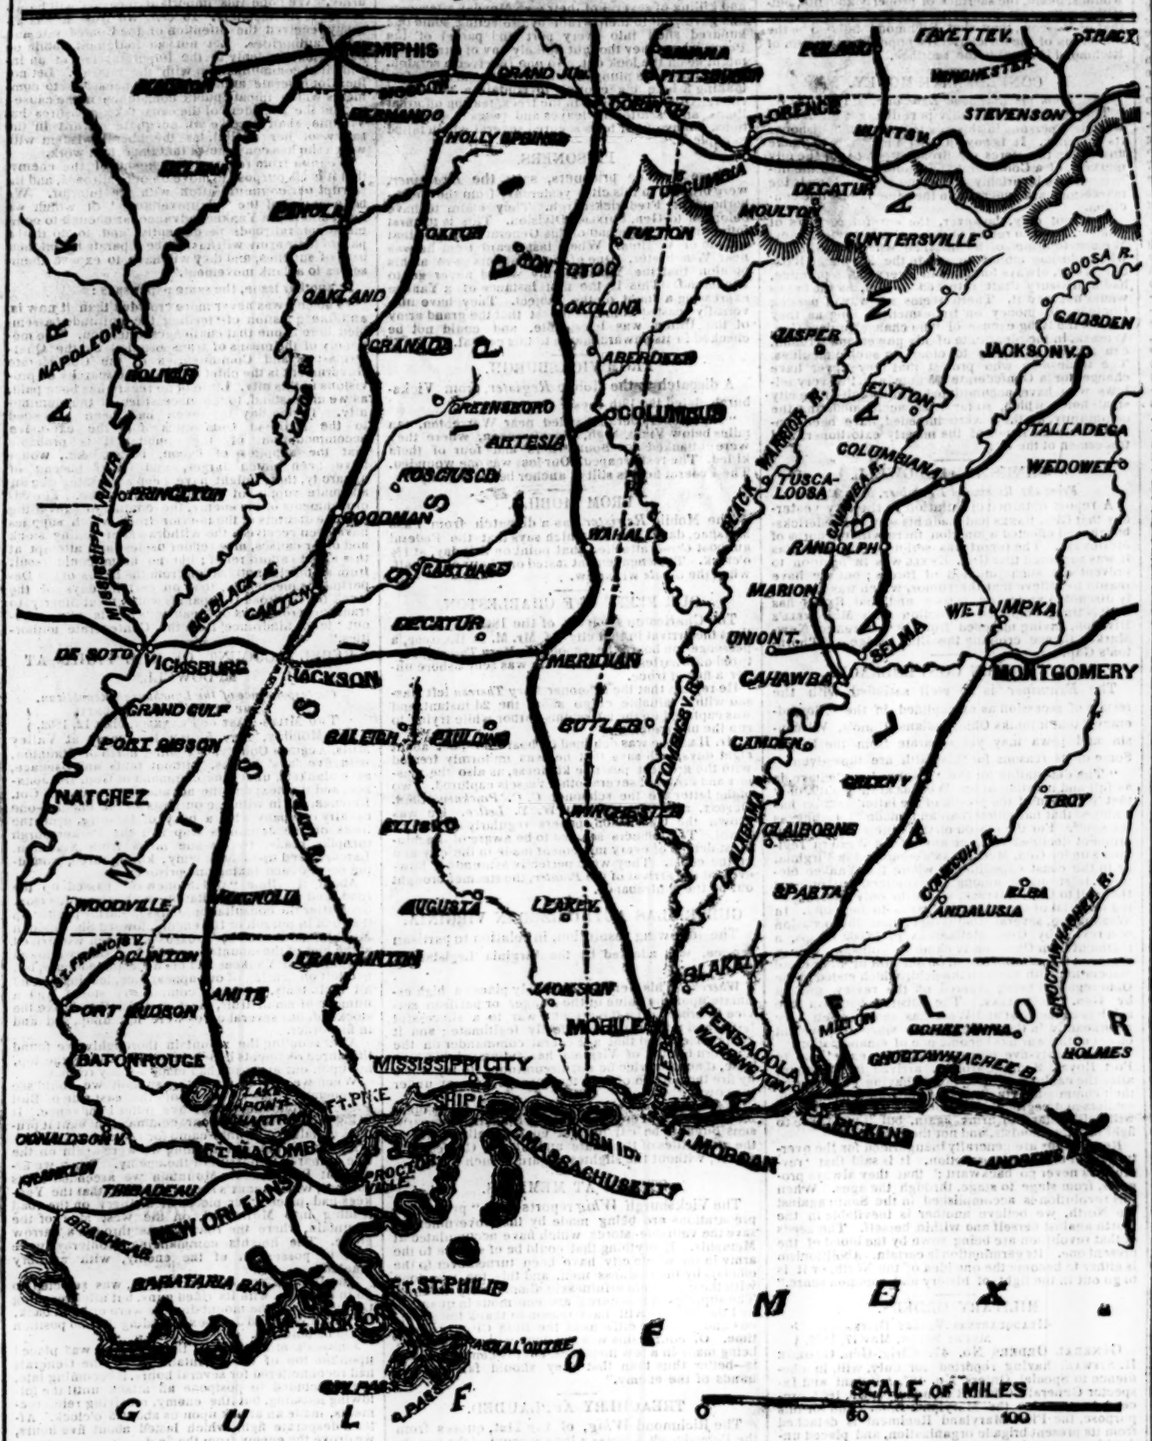
At this hour Corinth is held by our outposts, and the cavalry is searching for the enemy. That sent by Gen. POPE came upon and dispersed the enemy eight miles below Corinth, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, in the act of burning the bridge, and captured forty prisoners. The enemy's rear guard destroyed the depôt, a few bales of cotton, and a church, and intended destroying the entire village, but the citizens saved some fifty houses. They also broke open stores, and burned the contents.

A large cavalry force, under Col. ELLIOT, sent out on Wednesday morning by a circuitous route, to destroy a bridge on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, south of Corinth, though they have not yet returned, have probably succeeded, as we learn from prisoners that it was known in Corinth last night that a large bridge had been destroyed, forty miles at the south, by a body of our cavalry, and that Gen. POPE's 20-pounder Parrott's, yesterday, enfiladed their camps, killing 80 men and 100 horses;—also, that a 30-pounder Parrott shell, thrown into Corinth by POPE as an experiment, destroyed a locomotive and killed the engineer.

It is thought among military men that the destruction of bridges South, the uncomfortable proximity of our falling shells, and the possibility of National success on the Mississippi, were the causes of the evacuation. The enemy's works, certainly, were of very great strength, and capable of making a stout resistance.

RETREAT OF THE REBEL ARMY FROM CORINTH.

Map Showing Corinth, and the Line of Retreat Westward toward Memphis or Southward toward Mobile; Okolona, the Alleged New Rebel Position, and the Relative Bearing of New-Orleans, Vicksburgh and Pensacola, Held by Our Forces.



portion of the Corinth forces will be able to reach Richmond, as they would have to pass through Mobile if moving by railroad, and Mobile is now commanded by our fleet. If they have moved south as given out, and not westward, Memphis falls into our hands, and the entire system of the Mississippi valley, together with the free navigation of the Mississippi River.

DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

UNION PRISONERS FROM THE SOUTH.

Their Reception in Washington, N. C.—List of their Names—Narrative of Imprisonment—Col. Corcoran and His Health—Officers Detained.

GOV. STANLY AT NEWBERN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEWBERN, N. C., Tuesday, May 27, 1862.

The release of fourteen hundred Union prisoners, many of them after a confinement of over six months in loathsome Southern prisons, constitutes the chief item of interest and rejoicing for the current week. The event will make glad the hearts in many hitherto desolate homes, and extract one of the bitterest fangs which war has planted in the National bosom. The event would have been hailed with unqualified satisfaction, had the rebel authorities acted with that generous clemency which has been practiced by our Government toward them, and released the large number of Union officers whom they still persist in keeping imprisoned at Salisbury.

The arrival of Hon. EDWARD STANLY, Provisional Governor, also marks an epoch in the revolution in North Carolina. He came on the Jersey Blue, and was received by Gen. BURNSIDE in a pouring rain, and conducted to the Union Hotel, where he took temporary quarters. He was accompanied by Mr. MIDGETT, Maj. ALEX. STEDMAN and Judge FOOTE. Sixteen North Carolinians, who had been released by the Government, and came on the same steamer, were entertained sumptuously at the hotel, and afterward permitted to depart to their respective homes. While waiting in the parlor of the hotel, a gentleman in undress uniform entered, and with a pleasant smile expressed his pleasure to see them, and hoped they would "make themselves comfortable." "Gentlemen," said Mr. MCCONKEY, "this is Gen. BURNSIDE." Instantly the whole party rose, removed their hats, and manifested the greatest pleasure at the unexpected introduction.

The long list of names of the released Union prisoners, which I send, will occupy so large and interesting a portion of this letter, I shall endeavor to be concise in other matters.

Expecting two hundred of the prisoners at Washington on Saturday, I left here on Friday by the steamer Cossack, and reached that place on Saturday morning. We found the place quiet in the protecting care of Col. POTTER and Provost-Marshal Lieut. TURNER, of the Massachusetts Twenty-fourth. They had not heard of the proposed release of our men, but proceeded immediately to make the necessary arrangements for their reception. In consequence of an accident on the Railroad, they did not arrive until Sunday afternoon, and then over four hundred came down the Tar River on two flats, towed by a small steamer christened the Col. Hill. The announcement of their coming soon spread through the town, and the Union troops, with the officers, as well as the officers and seamen on board of the U. S. steamers Delaware and Louisiana, were on the qui vive to welcome their arrival. The wharf near the bridge was also watched with unflagging interest by the contrabands, who manifested much curiosity to see the Yankees who had so long experienced the tender mercies of the rebels.

The half-dozen churches in the town have been shut up ever since the arrival of our gunboats and troops, leaving their flocks, or such of them as remained, a prey to the Yankee wolves; thus making good the Scripture, "The hireling, when he seeth the wolf coming, fleeth and leaveth the sheep." The lambs of the flock, however, appear to be as safe as they would have been in the most pious keeping. The stores in the town are nearly all closed, and their occupants or owners followed the general hegira, upon the approach of our forces. Of those who remain, there are a few who profess Union sentiments, but they are numerically weak, and so timid withal that their influence is not felt, and their voice is like that of an infant in the midst of a hurricane—it is not heard. JOHN RESPESS, the zealous individual who was going to gather a regiment of his neighbors to serve in the Union cause, and who ran well for a season, not having much root in himself, has suddenly subsided, and "resigned all connection with the Union army." He ought not to be greatly persecuted for the service he rendered the cause. His father is an estimable and reliable Union man, though at present powerless.

The Provost Marshal, besides attending efficiently to the Police of the town, contrives to find time to issue a little semi-weekly sheet, which contains all the latest war news and other matters of interest, for general circulation.

But to return to the prisoners. Just at sunset the shriek of a steam whistle, a short distance up the river, announced the approach of the long-expected soldiers of the Union on their pilgrimage homeward. In a moment, the river front was lined with people, whose eyes soon caught a glimpse of a diminutive steamboat, above which floated, at the fore, a small white flag, and at the stern, a dingy signal of uncertain character, but which proved to be the symbol of secession. Two long floats, lashed side and side, filled with men, were towing astern. As they neared the bridge, the American flag which flies over Col. POTTER's headquarters was lifted by a timely flaw of wind, and revealed its broad stripes and bright stars gleaming above the green foliage of the trees. Instantly, as if by magic, the still depth of Old Tar River resounded to a thunder shout of cheers from the Union soldiers. They stood, once more, redeemed, regenerated and disenthralled, under the protective ægis of the Stars and Stripes. The sound was caught up by the officers and soldiers who thronged the wharf, and responsive and welcoming cheers greeted the ransomed troops, who cheered again and again, until the boat reached the landing. No portion of the crowd seemed more delighted than the blacks, who swung their tattered hats and bonnets in the cause of the old flag. They numbered four hundred and seven, and were accompanied by Capt. STEDMAN, of the Forty-fourth North Carolina Regiment, and two Lieutenants, with a company of infantry.

The officers proceeded to Col. POTTER's headquarters, where they formally delivered their prisoners, and after a brief conversation, again returned on board their boat, and returned up the river.

Our fellows were transferred to the Pilot Boy, and carried on board of the Cossack. As they left the wharf, they gave vehement cheers for the flag of the Union, and three sepulchral groans for JEFF. DAVIS, in which they were assisted by their comrades on the wharf. The steamer proceeded to Newbern, and will reach New-York by the time you receive this letter. The following account of the sufferings of our Union men, while held as prisoners of war, is given by an intelligent young man belonging to Syracuse, N. Y.:

NARRATIVE OF A RETURNED PRISONER—HEALTH OF COL. CORCORAN.

Mr. F. DARBY, of Syracuse, N. Y., a private of Company D, Twelfth New-York Volunteers, was taken at Upton's Hill, Va., August 27, 1861. He was carried to Richmond and detained in the Tobacco Warehouse Prison three months. He was stripped of his overcoat and all his private property at Fairfax Court-house. He states that he, with five hundred other prisoners, belonging to various Union regiments, were sent to Tuscaloosa, Ala., on the 25th of November. The prisoners, as they were removing them through the streets of Richmond, broke out and sang the "Star-Spangled Banner." They were transferred by railroad, going to Montgomery and thence by steamer down the Alabama and up the Tombigbee and Black Warrior. On the way they were allowed three hard crackers and a small piece of bacon daily; the latter was maggotty and unfit for food. At every station they were taunted in the most unfeeling manner. The citizens would run by the side of the cars at some places and call upon the officers to "shoot the Yankee sons of ——," "What did you come down here for?" "What are you fighting for?" "You came down to ravage our houses, and burn our women and children, didn't ye?" "Guess you've got enough of it, haven't you?" "How did you like Manassas?" were the more common phrases and salutations. At Tuscarora they were placed in a vacant hotel, the United States Court-house, and the Post-office. The owner of the hotel strenuously opposed its being used for that purpose, but the Lieutenant-Commanding said he would turn the Yankees loose and take it. Their rations here consisted of a pound of corn bread, without salt, and a pound of beef shanks and necks, raw, daily. After it was cooked it afforded about three ounces of meat to each man. Half a pint of rice soup was also allowed to a man. The men were generally without clothing or blankets, and slept on the bare floor without bed or covering. They were closely confined, and were allowed to go out only four at a time. Meantime the majority of the men were afflicted with severe diarrhœa. A tub placed to receive ordure and offal was permitted to stand in the room for twelve hours, and often until 9 o'clock in the morning. The prisoners were literally covered with vermin. Until the Government clothing was received in January, they had no change of garments. Guards were constantly stationed in front of doors and windows, which were always kept closed during the night. During the day time they were sometimes opened for ventilation.

The poor citizens of the town were in a deplorable condition for food. They said they had been obliged to enlist to keep from starving. Between seventy and eighty of the rebel guards were sent to the hospital, sick, in less than six weeks after they arrived in the town. The rebels were so reduced in men that officers often were compelled to perform guard duty.

Papers sometimes found their way into the prison. The accounts of each action generally stated that "there was a great slaughter of the Hessians, and nobody hurt on our side."

About the 25th of February they signed a parole, and on the 1st of March started on their return. During their confinement four had died. One of these was Corporal HUMPHREYS, of the Philadelphia Cavalry; another a private of the New-York Twenty-seventh, belonging in Poughkeepsie, and a third COXLEY, of the First Minnesota Regiment. The other was a private of the Seventh Ohio.

They were transported in box-cars, generally used for carrying horses, and were eleven days on their way to Weldon, N. C. Here the order for their release was countermanded by HOWELL COBB, the rebel Brigadier-General. On the road they received three crackers daily, with meat only a part of the time. They were sent to Salisbury, N. C., and placed in close confinement, after being thirteen days on the route. They were confined in an old cotton factory. Here they found about five hundred Union prisoners from New-Orleans, and three hundred and fifty sailors and soldiers from Richmond, making a total of some thirteen hundred. The indignation of the prisoners was intense on finding themselves deceived and detained, after the promise of liberation. They were all opposed to the proposed visit of Mr. FISH, who was reported to be coming with money to relieve their wants. They did not wish to leave a dollar of gold or silver in the hands of the rebels.

At Salisbury their rations consisted of a small slice of salt pork, and from twelve to fourteen ounces of sour bread. There being no hops or potatoes to make yeast, peach leaves were used as a substitute, and the fibres were often freely mixed with the bread. The constant use of this food, without change of diet, produced scurvy among the men, some of whom were so bad they could only walk by the aid of a cane.

A single gleam of humanity irradiated this long night of barbarism and suffering. On one occasion a "small potato" was distributed to each man, to be eaten raw for an anti-scorbutic. The effect, if any was produced by it, was so small that they didn't see it.

On hearing the news from the battle of Pea Ridge, the prisoners indulged in some hilarity, and began to sing the "Star Spangled Banner," when they were fired upon by the guard, who discharged his piece through the door, wounding three prisoners—one of whom lost two fingers. One day, some of the chivalry from the country, men and women, were walking in the prison-yard to get a view of the Yankees. The women shook their puny fists at the prisoners as they peered through the windows above them. Seeing this unchivalric demonstration, one of the men who had a small American flag concealed on his person, threw its folds out of the window, and waved it at them. The rebel Lieut. BRADFORD, of Baltimore, witnessed the movement and took his position behind a tree, where he stood for two hours with a loaded gun, watching an opportunity to shoot the daring Yankee, if he or any of the men appeared again at the window.

On Saturday, May 17, Col. CORCORAN, Col. WILCOX, and their associates, making some forty commissioned officers, arrived at Salisbury. They were placed in the factory negro quarters.

Mr. DARBY conversed with Col. CORCORAN, who referred to his harsh treatment since he had been a prisoner. The close confinement he had suffered at Charleston and elsewhere had worn upon his health. He was kept in a separate cell, and closely guarded. His bodily health was poor, but his spirits were buoyant and hopeful. He said he could die but once, and, if necessary, was willing to lay down his life in the cause of his country. For the last three days before the prisoners left Salisbury, Col. CORCORAN was confined to his room. Though in feeble health, as usual, there was no alarming change in his symptoms.

Wednesday, May 21, the released prisoners began to sign the paroles preparatory to starting for home. It was a joyful occasion, or would have been if the prisoners had believed they were really to be released. But they had been disappointed and deceived so many times, they made up their minds for the worst; and when fairly on board the cars, they did not know what minute they might be turned back. An Adjutant and a guard of six men accompanied the first squad of two hundred to Goldsborough, where they were turned over to the Commander at that place. Here they were placed in charge of a similar guard, who accompanied them to Tarboro, where another guard of one company went with them down the river to Washington, N. C.

Fifteen miles beyond Goldsboro, where a culvert had been washed out by the rain, the engine, tender and express car went down the embankment, making a complete wreck of the whole. The fireman and wood-passer were instantly killed. The engineer received internal injuries from which he died in six hours after the accident. He at first refused medical attention from the Union surgeon, with a profane and contemptuous remark, but afterward sent for him, when he was beyond surgical aid.

The three rear cars, containing the Union prisoners, broke the couplings and ran backward at the instant of the accident, and stood unharmed on the track a hundred yards in the rear. A Confederate officer remarked, in giving an account of the accident, that "the Union cars remained on the track, while the secesh part of the train had gone to the devil, as usual." Five engines lay useless and broken on this road, there being no one to repair them. For the first time since they were prisoners they received an abundance of wholesome and good food, while on their way to our lines. At Tarboro' they received better treatment than they have experienced in any other place in the South.

They were placed on board of two large floats, and in tow of the little high-pressure steamer Col. Hill, reached our lines at Washington, N. C., on Sunday evening.

By request, I would state that Mr. ALFRED SEARLEY, brother of the Provisional Governor, denies having made use of the unkind expression in regard to his brother, attributed to him at the time of his arrest. The statement was made upon the authority of an officer who assisted in his arrest, but I cheerfully notice his denial of the charge. He was released from confinement, by order of Gen. BURNSIDE, previous to his brother's arrival.

Company I, of the Massachusetts Seventeenth, on Thursday last, started for Pollockville, on the Trent road, for the purpose of seizing a quantity of cotton said to be stored there, and about to be burned by the Confederate authorities. Before reaching their destination they fell into a rebel ambush, and were fired upon by a party of rebel soldiers, armed with shot-guns, who were concealed in the bushes. After firing two or three rounds they rapidly retreated. During the skirmish they lost privates John Leary and James W. Brown, who were instantly killed; First Sergt. C. W. Judge, Sergt. Thomas Earls, Corporal John McAller, privates Daniel Farrington and Thomas McMahon were severely, and James Carroll, William Wilson and John H. Morse, slightly wounded.

They were obliged to return without accomplishing their object. E. S.

THE SITUATION AT RICHMOND.

From the Richmond Examiner.

No situation so important as the present has been observed on the American continent. What tremendous consequences, what terrible stakes, what enormous results, depend upon the action and success of the two armies camped within a few miles of the hills of Richmond. Spectators of their own fate, the citizens are compelled to remain silent and patient while their liberty or slavery, wealth or poverty, life or death, is decided by the skill of McClellan and the intelligence of Johnston. These armies are not yet trying the question by an appeal to the sword. Neither General has yet fought a battle. Hitherto they have only played a game of chess, and they are still engaged in evolutions. One plays an offensive, the other a defensive, game. Hitherto one of these men has stopped the advance of the other as long as he could and then retired. Perhaps he was quite right to do so at Manassas and Yorktown, for the destiny of the nation was not in jeopardy at either point, and it was important to preserve the army intact for a more important service. But let all parties be warned of the consequences inevitably to follow a similar step from the banks of the Chickahominy. Those consequences are not only military, but civil,—national. They are demoralisation and disorganization, out of which the army and the country will endeavor to save itself by a new creation of leaders and rulers; adding thus to all our calamities and difficulties, that of revolution.

A complete and total defeat of Johnston's army, an utter annihilation of the best troops and rout of the others, a successful assault and storm of the city by an overwhelming mass of Federal troops, would be a heavy blow to the Southern Confederacy, but by no means fatal to it. The spirit of the people and the soldiers, the confidence of the country, would neither be broken or diminished, but rather rise in a fiercer flame and to a loftier exaltation. The enemy would be desperately crippled to attain their victory, and could not pursue their advantage. The remains of a beaten but brave army would be quickly reorganized and rapidly recruited. The war would go on with more bitterness and determination than ever.

Not thus would be the situation of the South should the line of the James and Virginia be abandoned on the stale plea of military necessity and scientific compulsion. We are disinclined to paint the condition of the Southern army and people and cause after such an event. To call over the consequences of that step is a task too painful. Every man of common intelligence and the least information on the state of feeling among the soldiers and the people may easily imagine them without the aid of our words.

The conclusion to be drawn is direct. This place must be the witness of a trial of strength. If military science will not permit of that appeal till all the evolutions in text books are gone through with, then the attack must be made and the battle delivered after they are done, whatever the inconveniences of our position, and however great, according to the principles of the art, the probabilities of our defeat may then be. Defeated or victorious, the Southern army and nation must be satisfied that the present Government and Generals can fight somewhere, and this is the last chance for them to prove it.

McClellan can operate against Richmond in two ways. He can come up the banks of the river, with his flank covered by his boats, bring with him his siege trains, and, if not attacked, do here for the second time what he has already done once with unmolested ease and success at Yorktown. Or, he can reach his army up the Northern bank of the Chickahominy through Hanover, get troops between Anderson's army and Richmond, and when he has done away with it, form a union with Banks and McDowell at his leisure. The Chickahominy furnishes an excellent defensive line for our army, but as McClellan is on the other side of it, it defends him too while occupied in these comfortable arrangements.

Of course, if he is allowed to take his own time and do all he wants over there; if the Confederate commanders are going to sit down and twiddle their thumbs till he condescends to begin with them; if his hauling of heavy guns and digging of trenches is to be repelled by the hauling of other guns and the digging of other trenches, then the end of it is certain. Nothing is more mathematically proven than the plans of attack taught to boys at West Point and other academies, provided armies can be reckoned into blocks of stone, which will stand still to be measured, weighed, calculated and then one to be lifted over another as if by cranes and pulleys. The attacking army, given the requisite time, transportation, and numbers, will always get the defending army in such a fix that it is bound to retire or be cut to pieces; and up to this time our defensive army has regularly retired in compliance with the principles of Jomini. Such has hitherto been the history of our war. But such is not the history of war in general, and it cannot always continue to be so here. There are such things as bravery, enterprise, invention, quickness of movement, determination of purpose, which have had much to do with the military results in every age and country, and they will sooner or later make their way over all the precedents of the late army of the United States.

It is easy to repeat the cuckoo song that war is a science; that no one knows it but those who have passed a life pretending to study it, that Generals have done so, newspapers have not done so; that it is impossible to deliver battle to superior forces in unassailable positions; that our Generals offer battle to McClellan, he will not accept it, &c. But an appeal from common conceit to common sense and to history is always justifiable. The greatest masters of the military profession have left on record this unanimous judgment, that war is an art, not a science, much less a mystery; that it cannot be taught or reduced to rules; that success in it depends upon mother-wit, not study; that quick perception, strong sense, courage, enterprise and general mental resource are the qualities that make a commander; that the worth of an officer is to be tested by his success, and the merit of a campaign is to be estimated by its results, and not by the opinions or criticisms of persons having military pretensions. Now, what have been the results of the campaign in Virginia? The war has lasted a year. Many battles have been fought. In every one of the battles fought in Virginia, with the exception of Cheat Mountain and Roanoke, the Confederate soldiers have had the advantage; yet the Confederate armies have been always in retreat, never in advance, abandoning position after position, according to rule and square, till now the State is nearly all swallowed by the enemy, its fields desolated, farm-houses sacked, the slaves wandering in troops, the people a nation in exile, and the Capital still safe only on the supposition that the precedent of the past shall here be abandoned. It is time to put in a protest against precedent, and to give solemn warning to all those, if any there be, who propose to continue the campaign in Virginia as it has been commenced.

But our Generals have often "offered battle." McClellan would not accept it. Therefore they could not fight him. On this point we would refer to a memorable piece of military history. When the great general of the civil wars of Rome was engaged in his campaign against Publius Silo, a distinguished commander of the other party, he bothered him much with his trenches and slow advance. Silo often led out his legions in choice positions, "offering battle," which Caius Marius would never accept. At last Publius Silo resorted to this simple expedient: He sent a herald in the lines of his adversary to make him this speech: "O, Caius Marius, if you are indeed a great general, why do you not come out of your ditches and fight me a battle?" Marius sent back his own herald to make him this reply: "O, Publius Silo, if you are a great general, why do you not make me come out and fight you a battle?"

"THE BLIND MAN—WORSHIP OF THE SOUTHERN PEOPLE."

From the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser.

Since our affairs have become so complicated by the inefficiency of those who were unfortunately vested with authority to conduct the war, it is no unfrequent thing to hear the lamentations of the country for a great leader to upturn the existing state of things and take us safely through the revolution. It may be well to consider why the prerequisites for a man for the times has not been compiled with. In the first place, it may be asserted as a humiliating fact in our history, that the whole tendency has been to repress leading merit and give commanding positions to mediocrity. If a man exhibited those high traits of ability, courage and energy which distinguished him as a representative of a great republicon movement, he at once became the mark for the envy of timid place-hunters, and the cry went through the land that he was a fire-brand and a factionist, attempting to undermine everything that was pure and good in society, to gratify his own ambition. The people—honest, confiding and unsuspecting as they always are—hearing these representations from their neighboring oracles, took counsel of their fears, and came to regard the foremost advocate of their cause as a very dangerous man. Time rolled on, and events vindicated the principles of our much abused statesman. but, true to the weakness of human nature, the prejudice to the man had festered until it would take years to heal the wound.

In this lamentable condition did this revolution find us. The illustration above made is only a specimen of a large class of men throughout the Confederacy who comprehended the necessity for secession far ahead of their compeers, and who were, therefore, the fittest persons to preside over the destinies of the new Government, which their superior sagacity and will had conceived, but who, forsooth, were set aside as rash and impracticable schemers, while others were installed into power who had remained at Washington until actually driven away, with tears in their eyes, by force of a virtuous Southern sentiment. Thus it was that, not satisfied with seceding from Washington, we must needs form a Government of those who have not yet rid themselves of the stench of its corruptions. Our great men, who had fought and won the battle of secession against Northern aggression and Southern submission, were thus, in the hour of our triumph, crushed and humiliated as martyrs to the liberties of their own countrymen. And now, when it is manifest that, through the evil influences which our people themselves have inaugurated, their strength has been wasted and their patriotism misapplied, they call aloud for a leader to rescue them from their misfortunes.

Would to God that some one would rise up powerful enough to unite the whole energies of such a people for the defence of the country against all opposers; but who can be that man under the difficulties which surround the position? Do you call upon those whom you sacrificed at the formation of your Government because they had led you triumphantly out of the old Union? Is it likely that they will voluntarily undergo another martyrdom for your sake when those to whom you have committed the keys have locked the door to popular opinion? When your President sits with his ears closed to the advice of the wise men of his country, and summarily disposes of every man as a fool or a liar who ventures to suggest a doubt as to his policy? When your Congress sits with closed doors and tells you that "military necessity" requires that you should know nothing of its proceedings, and, therefore, have no right to pass judgment on what it should or should not do? When all this and more has been done, denying you a right to a voice in your Government, except through the whispers of your representatives, are you going to sit still and ask for a leader to remedy things?

We tell you, fellow-citizens, the time has come when the people must prove their right to a free government by demanding to have it represent their will. Confidence has well nigh ruined you. A few months ago a man was liable to the charge of treason who dared to question the infallibility of your President and Congress. When it was said that the doors of the government should be opened, so that the public might be heard in the decisions of questions of general policy, in which all were equally interested, you gave ear to the timid plea that the enemy would know what we were doing, and believed all was going on right. No one asked to know the military secrets of the Government; and, if they were worth keeping, Congress had as little right to know them as the rest of you. But what if the enemy did know some of our differences? Would that take any of our strength from us? Are we so weak that we must sacrifice internal vigor and purity to a foolish sensibility as to what others may think of us? We are sure all will now agree that the war upon us has been managed with the utmost energy as contradistinguished from our do-nothing policy, and it is because the Northern people have been heard and felt in their own Government. When they found their authorities were going wrong, they took hold of them with all the power of the Press and public opinion. Their Congress discussed its measures in public, and the people knew and dictated what they did. Their President, although having credit among us for being a clown, had sense enough to know that he did not know everything. He took counsel, and divided responsibility with those who were versed in their own departments; and when men were found incompetent he had respect enough for an enlightened public opinion to remove those who were obnoxious. While, therefore, our people have greater reason for hating Northern principles, since they have become more aggressive, they have also good ground for emulating the spirit of the Yankees in the management of their own Government.

We are yet strong enough to be free, if we maintain the freedom of speech and of the Press. Our Government must be made to feel that we are the principal and it the agent. But this cannot be done while Congress sits with closed doors, and the President continues to have no respect for the opinions of the people. Our men will, of course, all refuse to lead as long as they are closeted, so as to be able to get no response from their constituents. Secrecy is the vitalizing element of little minds. It dwarfs great men to the smallest standard. Perhaps, if the Provisional Congress had condescended to expose the inefficiency of Mr. Davis by public sessions, we would to-day have a vigorous and far-seeing Executive. *As it is, we are committed for six years. * * * There is, however, a wide-spread indication that the people are becoming thoroughly united in the opposition, * * * and whenever this feeling reaches a crisis, the present Administration may find it wise to give way to men who have the mind and nerve for the times.*

COTTON BURNING.

From the Richmond Examiner.

Richmond, Friday, May 2.

To Maj.-Gen. M. Lovell:

The following dispatch was sent to you on the 25th ult.

A. T. BLEDSOE,
Assistant Secretary of War.

It has been determined to burn all the cotton and tobacco, whether foreign or our own, to prevent it from falling into the hands of the enemy.

You will therefore destroy it all, if necessary, to prevent them from getting it.

(Signed) G. W. RANDOLPH,
Secretary of War.

Confederate States of America,
Headquarters Department No. 1,
Camp Moore, Louisiana, May 3, 1862.

General Order No. 17.—The enemy, by an overwhelming naval force having succeeded in passing the defences and gaining possession of the City of New-Orleans, are jubilant in the boast, that the struggle which a gallant people are making from a bondage to which death would be preferable, is rapidly closing in disgrace and humiliation to the South. They claim that the great Valley of the West being opened, the remotest commercial interest of the civilized world will have cause to side with them in the iron-handed controversy which they are waging upon us, for the reason that cotton will now flow from every tributary of the Mississippi to seek a market under their protection in the ports of Europe; for without that staple they know full well that a brief period will put an end to their attempt to conquer the South. It is with the people to decide this question for themselves.

If you are resolved to be free; if you are worthy of the heroic blood that has come down to you through hallowed generations; if you have fixed your undimmed eye upon the brightness that spreads out before you and your children, and are determined to shake away forever and ever all political association with the vandal horde that now gather like a pestilence about your fair country; now, my fellow-citizens, is the time to strike! One sparkling, living touch of fire in manly action for one hour upon each cotton plantation, and the eternal seal of Southern independence is fired and fixed in the great heart of the world.

It needs no argument to show that, with the destruction of negro property, the cotton and sugar lands of the South would be worthless, and that the mighty effort of this abolition war is for that purpose, is amply proved by a thousand evidences unnecessary to refer to in this order, and which are rapidly culminating in the various schemes of the Federal Congress in reference to the destruction of the slave-holding interest in all the Border States.

Your Major-General calls in this hour of danger, for one heroic effort, and he feels consciously proud that he will not call in vain. Let not a solitary bale of cotton be left as spoil for the invader, and all will be well.

By order of Major-Gen. Lovell.

J. G. PICKETT, Assistant Adjutant-General.

We learn that the people of Savannah and Mississippi are responding to this order to destroy the cotton with singular unanimity. The Federals will not find a solitary bale on the river, and that in the interior will all be destroyed if any attempt is made by them to secure it.

FROM MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser states that there are about 50,000 bales of cotton in Montgomery, which will be burned on the approach of the enemy. The same paper publishes these orders:

Office Adjutant and Inspector General A. M.,
Montgomery, Ala., May 8, 1862.

Special Orders No. 29.—1. The large amount of cotton in the City of Montgomery, renders its removal to a safe distance a work of time. Circumstances may render it necessary to destroy it before such removal can be effected. To avoid endangering the city by burning, all the cotton which cannot be removed to a safe distance, will be removed to the warehouse known as "Gunter's Warehouse."

2. The Railroad Companies are hereby ordered to arrange by Monday next to use all their transportation power, save such as may be required for the service of the Confederate Government, to assist in transporting the cotton which owners may prefer to take from the city.

3. The officer charged with the execution of this order is hereby directed to press into service all the public drays of the city, save such as may be required for the service of the Confederate Government, to aid in transporting cotton from the warehouses in the city to "Gunter's Warehouse," the steamboat Landings, and railroad depôts.

4. Col. Wm. H. Chambers, Special Aid-de-camp, is charged with the execution of this order.

By order of JNO. GILL SHORTER,
Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

H. P. Watson, Adjt. and Insp. Gen.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PUBLIC DRAYS.

All the public drays of the city are required to remove the cotton, under the military order of the Governor. The owners of licensed drays, except those employed in the service of the Confederate Government, will send them to Shular & Ardis' warehouse, at 6 o'clock, Monday morning next, where they will report to Mr. J. G. Maxwell.

WM. H. CHAMBERS, Aid-de-Camp.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF COTTON.

I have been informed, that in some instances, parties have removed cotton from the warehouses to their private premises. I hereby give notice that no cotton will be permitted to remain where it will endanger the city; and unless it is forthwith removed, it will be removed, under the military authority, to a place where it can be burned without destroying the city.

WM. H. CHAMBERS, Aid-de-Camp.

"ARE WE PREPARED?"

From the Richmond Examiner, May 23.

Every day brings Richmond and its inhabitants nearer either the hour of their deliverance or humiliation. Such an army as never menaced capital before on this continent is within sight of the heights of the Capital of the Southern Confederacy. Between the invader, the seat of Government, and our homes, lies the noble army of its defenders, watching the slimy movements of the invader as he coils among the hills, and gallantly foiling him in every darting of his fangs. Our defenders are our own husbands, fathers, sons, brothers, and kindred, dear to us, and we lay down at night and rise up from day to day preserved from invasion by the loved ones in the front. But the enemy is strong in numbers, and his energies are bent on the capture of Richmond. His coils will become closer and closer day by day. He will not return until defeated and driven from the field.

But are we citizens prepared to receive all this? Are we prepared to receive the corpses of our brethren fresh from the gory field, to welcome and attend on the wounded, dear as they may be to us? Are we prepared to witness the desolation of our homes, and to encounter all the sacrifices which a sanguinary bombardment is likely to incur? We hope the citizens are equal to the sacrifice required—pains, wounds, death, the sacrifice of property and life, notwithstanding. It were better that Richmond's fate be that of Moscow, than that Richmond fails to be the habitation of the invader. We hope the patriotism of Richmond is equal to the sacrifice.

CONFEDERATE MONEY.

From the Richmond Examiner, May 23.

The authorities are idly permitting a number of worthless persons in this city to debase and dishonor its currency. It is now almost impossible to make any use in the stores on Broad-street, or in the city markets, of a Confederate five dollar note, as the unkempt Jews invariably "hash no change," and the marketmen are generally in the same impossible condition.

It is not only, however, the careful retailers of small wares who refuse to take Confederate money. We are informed of an instance where a gentleman who had some money to pay in the Exchange Bank of this city, always foremost in every sharp practice, had a treasury draft returned to him, as the banks would not take it. There seems no way of passing Confederate money on tradesmen as long as they protest the lying excuse of "no change" unless Gen. Winder, in the plentitude of his power and wisdom, can invent some way to clear up such difficulties. The tradesmen who protest that they never have change for a Confederate $5 note are the very fellows who have accumulated trunks full of the city small notes, which, so far from accommodating the community, as they were intended, have been converted into the hands of the miserly extortioners and tradesmen of the city.

BANKS AND McDOWELL.

From the Richmond Examiner, May 22.

A report obtained circulation in the city yesterday that Gen. Banks had made his way to Fredericksburgh, and effected a junction there with the corps of McDowell. The report was seriously discredited, as it was supposed that Gen. Ewell was in position to prevent any such junction of forces; but we have reason to believe that the rumor, which was generally discarded yesterday, is true, and that Banks has by this time completed a junction with McDowell's Division, having marched from Strasburgh to New-Market, thence crossing the Blue Ridge at Thornton's Gap.

A WESTERN CONFEDERACY.

The Examiner is so well satisfied with the results of secession as exemplified in the "Confederacy," that it thinks Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa may yet separate from the Union. Some of its reasons for this faith are thus given:

"The detestation for the 'Yankee,' we believe, is as full and heartfelt at the West as at the South, only that the blood of the people of the latter section has stamped that hatred eternal and made it lasting as the skies. For the reason of this bitterness the Government declined to place any of the Western regiments under Gen. McClellan's command in Virginia, or in the coast expeditions, where the Yankee element is strongest among the soldiers, but ordered them all to Gen. Halleck, where the only really fighting material of the Federal army is to be found. In Washington, several months ago, upon the occasion of a review by Gen. McClellan of 75,000 troops, a regiment from Ohio nearly came in collision with a regiment from Connecticut, on account of their close association with them on the field, which ended in the Ohio regiment being ordered off the review ground by Gen. McClellan. The dislike between the soldiers of the East and West has shown itself very significantly in the Federal army since the evident object of the war has become one of emancipation.

Over twenty-five officers from the expedition to Port Royal, South Carolina, arrived in Baltimore after the capture of that point, having surrendered their commissions in disgust at the fraternizing of the soldiers and negroes. They declared that they would willingly enter the army again, but it would be to fight the Abolitionists, and not the South.

Revolutions are generally inaugurated for the overturning of error and corruption. It is said that 'revolutions never go backward;' that they always progress, from stage to stage, through the ages. When this revolution is accomplished in the South against the North, we believe another is inevitable in the North against herself and within herself. The seeds of that revolution are being sown by the blood of the present one. Its germination is certain. Abolitionism is either to become the one idea of the North, or it is to go out in the light of history and common sense."

MILITARY ORDERS.

Headquarters Valley District,
Mount Sodon, May 17, 1862.

General Orders No. 47.—Brig.-Gen. George H. Stewart having reported for duty, will, in obedience to Special Orders No. 107, Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, Richmond, May 9, 1862, proceed to organize the Maryland Line. And for this purpose, the First Maryland Regiment is detached from its present brigade organization, and placed under his command.

I would strongly urge every patriotic Marylander who has cast his destiny with the Southern Confederacy, to come promptly forward and join this Organization, headed by one of Maryland's gifted sons, and to do what he can to make the Maryland Line invincible against the tyranny which continues to trample in the dust the rights of his native State.

(Signed) T. J. JACKSON, Maj.-Gen.

Requisitions for ordnance stores for the use of troops in the vicinity of Richmond, will be made directly to Capt. C. G. Baldwin, commanding Richmond Arsenal on Seventh-street.

Such requisitions must be made, in the first instance, on the Division Ordnance Officer, and indorsed by him, in case he cannot fill the requisition.

In case of emergency the requisition may be made direct on the Richmond Arsenal, on the approval of the Brigade Commander, on statement of the emergency.

No attention will be paid to requisitions for ammunition, which do not state the amount on hand when the requisition is made.

These restrictions are necessery to prevent the waste of ammunition.

J. GORGAS, Colonel, Chief of Ordnance.

FLOYD.

From the Charleston Mercury.

The General Assembly of the State of Virginia has passed a bill appointing Gen. John B. Floyd Major-General of the forces of Virginia, with authority to raise an army of 20,000 men, (non-conscripts,) specially for the defence of Western Virginia. It will be remembered that after the bloody and stubbornly contested fight at Fort Donelson, and when it was decided that the post could no longer be held against the overwhelming odds of the enemy, Gen. Floyd, who had resolved never to be taken prisoner, succeeded in extricating himself and his brigade from the doomed fort, just previous to the surrender. Soon afterward both he and Brig.-Gen. Pillow were publicly suspended by the President from their respective commands. Although the Press and the people of the Old Dominion have, for months, been clamorous for the restoration of Gen. Floyd to his command, up to this time he has not been restored. Throughout the State of Virginia the name of Floyd is a tower of strength to the Southern cause, and the Legislature of that State, in again placing him in the field, have taken a step which will, doubtless, go far toward insuring the security of the important mines and railroads of that rugged region, to conquer which is now the especial ambition of the precious knave and renegade, John Charles Fremont.

FROM CORINTH.

Mobile, Thursday, May 22, 1862.

A special dispatch to the Advertiser, dated Corinth, yesterday, says:

"Skirmishing continued yesterday without any important results. Our forces shelled the enemy out on the Farmington road. No casualties on our side. The loss of the enemy is unknown.

The indications portend a battle near at hand. Indeed the conflict may begin at any moment. A heavy rain this morning postponed movements

Butler's infamous order has fired our army. Rev. Dr. Palmer delivered an address to our soldiers, which stirred them deeply.

A Federal spy will be hung to-day.

SECOND DISPATCH.

Mobile, Tuesday, April 22.

A special dispatch to the Advertiser from Corinth last night says:

"There was general picket skirmishing on our right and left lines. On the left the enemy threw a number of shells without damage. On our right several casualties occurred. Among the killed is Capt. Richards, of the Thirty-first Mississippi. The enemy suffered much. A general engagement is expected to-morrow. Our whole army marched out this evening. Our troops are in high spirits and confident of victory.

Gen. Halleck sent 200 Confederate prisoners having the small-pox, to Fort Pillow, in exchange for Federal prisoners sent from here. Gen. Villepreque refused to receive them.

Gen. Beauregard sent a letter to Halleck to-day charging him with bad faith and inhumanity. Halleck replied denying knowledge of the fact that the men had the small-pox."

AN ALLEGED OUTRAGE.

From the Richmond Examiner, May 23.

We have the particulars of a brutal and fiendish outrage perpetrated a day or two ago by the Yankee marauders in Hanover County. The house of an estimable and well-known citizen by the name of Cross was invaded by the ruffians, and as some of them were in the act of maltreating his wife in the most shameful manner, he shot one of their number with a fowling-piece. A halter was immediately put around his neck, and he was taken by the Yankees and hung to a tree in his own yard.

OUR GUNBOATS.

From the Richmond Examiner, May 23.

We learn that one of the enemy's gunboats yesterday ascended the river to a point called Allan's Farm, about 18 miles below the city. About 200 Yankees were landed, while the boat shelled the neighboring woods. It is supposed that the party was intended for a marauding excursion.

OUR GUNBOATS IN THE JAMES RIVER.

The Petersburgh Express learns that—

"The number of Yankee gunboats now lying in James River, off City Point, is eight. They keep well out in the stream, nearly two miles from the shore, and but little can be discovered of their operations. They were greatly exasperated at the capture and killing of several of their men Monday afternoon, and gave vent to their wrath by projecting some one hundred shell into every part and parcel of the Point, where they thought it likely any of our pickets might be on the look out. No one received a scratch. One of the shells plunged into the earth and exploded, making a hole big enough to contain a horse and rider. Others exploded in the trees, tearing off great limbs and scattering leaves and twigs in all directions. Many of our boys secured several which failed to explode."

PRISONERS.

Three Yankee prisoners, says the Examiner, were brought to this city, yesterday, from the neighborhood of Fredericksburgh. They claim to have belonged to Gen. Shields' Division. This is the first intimation we have had of this General's being in that section of Virginia. When last heard from he was near Winchester. One of the prisoners gave as his opinion that the Yankee army would never get to Richmond. This is the first instance of a Yankee expressing a doubt on the subject. They have universally boasted from first to last that the grand army of the Union was irresistible, and could not be checked in its onward march to this capital.

FROM VICKSBURGH.

A dispatch to the Mobile Register, from Vicksburgh, dated the 19th says:

"Eighteen Federals landed near Warrenton, ten miles below Vicksburgh, this afternoon, where they were attacked by Southerners and four of them killed. The rest escaped. Our loss was one wounded. The Federal fleet is still at anchor below the city."

FROM MOBILE.

The Mobile Register has a dispatch from Pass Marshac, dated May 18, which says that the Federal gunboat Creole attacked that point on that day, at 1½ o'clock. The engagement lasted one hour and a half, when the Creole withdrew.

OUR FLEET OFF CHARLESTON.

The Charleston Courier, of the 18th instant, notices the arrival in that city of Mr. M. B. Hasloop, a passenger on board the schooner Mary Theresa, captured off Charleston harbor. He was sent ashore under a flag of truce.

He reports that the schooner Mary Theresa left Nassau with a valuable cargo about the 2d instant, and was captured on the 9th off this harbor while trying to run the blockade.

Mr. Hasloop was detained on board the fleet about eight days, and says that he was uniformly treated with the greatest possible kindness, as also the masters and crews of several other vessels captured. Two of the latter are the schooner C. C. Pinckney, Capt. Dupont, and the pilot-boat W. Y. Leitch. He was shown the Charleston papers regularly while on board. The officers seemed to be aware of the minutest details of every movement made in the city and on the coast. They were perfectly astounded, however, at the arrival of the Planter, the steamer brought out by the contrabands.

GUERRILLAS AUTHORIZED IN VIRGINIA.

The following resolution, in relation to partisan service, was adopted by the Virginia Legislature, May 17, 1862:

Whereas, This General Assembly places a high estimate upon the value of the ranger or partisan service in prosecuting the present war to a successful issue, and regards it as perfectly legitimate; and it being understood that a Federal commander on the northern border of Virginia has intimated his purpose, if such service be not discontinued, to lay waste by fire the portion of our territory at present under his power;

Resolved by the General Assembly, That in its opinion, the policy of employing such rangers and partisans ought to be carried out energetically, both by the authorities of this State and of the Confederate States, without the slightest regard to such threats.

STORES AT MEMPHIS.

The Vicksburgh Whig reports that "prudential preparations are being made by the Government to save the valuable stores which have accumulated at Memphis. Everything that could be of service to the army in the whole city have been turned over to the officials by the business men, and this, too, was done with the utmost cheerfulness in almost every instance. The supplies thus secured are enormous in quantity, and the soldiers will have reason to thank the generous and patriotic citizens of the Bluff City for a long time. Of course this was not done without sacrifices being made in a few instances, but the general verdict is—better thus than that they should fall into the hands of the enemy."

TREACHERY APPLAUDED.

The Richmond Whig, of the 21st, quotes from the Petersburgh Express a long account of the treacherous capture of a party of our officers and seamen from the United States gunboat Wachusett, who had been lured on shore, and were fired on when advancing under a flag of truce. We have already published a statement of this affair from our own officers. The rebels gloat over it as a triumph of skill. We quote:

"As soon as our men were seen double-quicking toward them, the Yankees on land endeavored to make their escape, but were, fortunately, cut off and made to surrender. The command to surrender was also given to those in the boat, and several times repeated without success. It being very evident to our men that they were endeavoring to get away without positively refusing to surrender, they raised their rifles and fired. One man was seen to fall overboard, and all the balance, except one, to fall in the boat, leaving no doubt whatever that one man of them all was left to tell the fate of his comrades. The survivor was seen to paddle off with one hand, and the inference is that the other was too much injured to be used. Our men then quickly returned to a train of cars stationed a little way off, put their prisoners aboard and brought them to town, whence they were immediately carried to Gen. Hugen's headquarters."

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE MERRIMAC.

From the Richmond Whig.

The pilots of the late Confederate States steamer Virginia, request a suspension of public opinion as to the statements respecting themselves, which appeared Monday morning in the published official report of Commodore Tatnall, detailing the loss of that invaluable steamer. The pilots state that the investigation, which will doubtless be had in a few days, will put the matter in its proper light.

In this connection (says the Petersburgh Express) we may add that evidences, which cannot be doubted, reach us daily of the terror which the Virginia created with the entire Yankee fleet, the enemy themselves being the witnesses. She could have passed Old Point and captured every vessel in Chesapeake Bay or York River without resistance. What hope can a people have when such an engine of warfare is wantonly destroyed.

VICTORIES CLAIMED.

Gen. Heth, whom Col. Crook beat at Lewisburgh the other day, claims to have destroyed or captured a whole army of ours. The Richmond Whig says of him:

"Gen. Heth is justifying the good opinion of those who urged his elevation to a General's command by the good service he is rendering in Western Virginia. His victory at Giles Court-house, like that of Jackson at McDowell, has been followed up to the destruction of the army opposed to him. This is well—it is glorious. We hail it as the harbinger of a new state of things, when battles are to be no longer indecisive, and victories no more fruitless.

We have news of a very promising state of tumult in Kentucky. The spell of mule contracts is losing its potency, and the falsehoods of Yankee editors their power to deceive.

We shall rejoice to see Kentucky again a State that her noble children now in exile and in arms can hear mentioned without blushing.

Information has reached the Government of continued successes in New-Mexico. Santa Fé is said to have fallen into our hands, and it is believed that the efforts of the Lincolnites to get a commanding foothold in that broad Territory of the South have now been effectually defeated.

The telegraph reports that the Yankee fleet off Charleston are expending ammunition on the adjacent islands. Our men declined to offer themselves as targets, and so set fire to their quarters and retired."

The Whig of the 21st says:

"The Lynchburgh Virginian, of yesterday, says that intelligence has been received there of a very successful affair in Giles County. A large force of the enemy, supposed to be about five thousand, was caught between the forces of Gens. Heth and Marshall, near the narrows of New River. The enemy seeing their predicament broke and fled without making a fight. Some of them took to the woods and others to the river, throwing away everything that could impede their progress. 'Between fifteen hundred and two thousand of them were captured.' It is said that four splendid mountain howitzers, imported by the enemy from Belgium, were a part of the booty secured by our troops.

They surrendered all their arms and property, and were paroled.

We have reason to believe this news was confirmed by official dispatches received here yesterday."

The following official dispatch was received here Tuesday afternoon:

New River, Monday, May 19,
Via Dublin, Tuesday, May 20.

By the coöperation of Gen. Marshall, Gen. Cox has been driven from this section of the country, losing many prisoners, his entire camp and garrison equipage, baggage, etc.

H. Heth, Brigadier-General Commanding.

The Richmond Whig, of the 21st, fears that the city may have its supplies stopped by a sudden cavalry dash of McClellan upon the railroads, and says:

"We must call the attention of the Quartermaster and Commissionary-General to the importance of organizing transportation upon the James River Canal. That work will be found adequate to conduct the communication with the upper country, if timely steps shall be taken to put all the batteaux and canal boats in order. It is plain that the enemy may make a cavalry dash upon our railroads and intercept their use, but if the canal be put and kept in good working order, the supplies of the upper country can be brought down with sufficient rapidity to maintain our army. We hope this important measure will be attended to immediately. Indeed, we trust it has already received the attention of the Confederate and canal authorities. Let not an indignant public be awakened suddenly to the important fact of an insufficient communication with the interior. Let not the Confederate authorities give occasion to comments which impair public confidence in the cause; and let the President of the canal take measures that Virginia shall receive an adequate reward in the safety of her capital, for the liberal wisdom with which she has constructed that important work.

We infer from reported movements of the enemy, that it is his purpose to move on our railroads, and interrupt our communication with the interior. We have no fear of the 'circumvallation' of which we hear, unless the Yankees advance far enough to command our railroads permanently, and to do this a part of their army will have to be separated from their base of supplies, and they will have to expose themselves to a dank movement."

In another issue, the same paper says:

"The city was never more crowded than it now is, and the question of 'feeding the multitude' assembled here is one that challenges attention. The monopoly of the means of transportation by the Quartermasters and Commissaries of the Confederate Government is the chief cause of the scarcity of provisions in this city. Little or no regard has been paid, as we understand, to the necessities of the community. If one day in seven had been conceded to the Railroad Companies for the exclusive accommodation of the public, it is probable that the supplies of bacon, butter, &c., would have been much larger, and that, instead of a scarcity, there might have been something like an adequate supply of bread and meat, &c. The encroachments of the enemy, the confusion prevailing in some districts of the interior from which supplies have been received, the withdrawal of rolling stock and other causes, may render useless any attempt at this time to afford relief; but no harm could result from an official notification from the heads of the Departments mentioned, that on certain days of the week the Railroad Companies would be at liberty to transport provisions or breadstuffs to this city, without 'let or hindrance' from the Confederate authorities."

REBEL ACCOUNT OF THE FIGHT AT McDOWELL.

Correspondence of the Lynchburgh Republican.

Camp at Pendleton County,
Two Miles East of Franklin, May 12, 1862.

On Monday, May 5, we left camp at Valley Mills, Augusta County, six miles north of Staunton, with five days' rations, without tents and baggage, save blankets, under the command of Gen. Ed. Johnson, and the next day the advance guard, under Col. Letcher, fell in with the outposts of the enemy—one cavalry company with a body of infantry, near the forks of the Jenning's Gap and the Parkersburgh turnpike roads, twenty-one miles from Staunton. Letcher fired upon the enemy, killing three, wounding several, and taking one prisoner.

About this time "Old Stonewall" passed up the road, and had a consultation with Gen. Johnson. Soon after the consultation, Johnson's army pushed up the road in pursuit of the enemy, toward Shenandoah Mountain, followed by Jackson's. When we arrived at the foot of the mountain, on the east side, we found a regiment of Yankees had been encamped there, but had left on hearing of our appearance, leaving behind all their tents, clothing, commissary stores, and a number of small arms, most of which they broke the stocks of, but several cases were left unopened and in fine order.

After scouting the mountain thoroughly, we found that three regiments had been camped upon the top, but upon our approach had made a hasty retreat.

When we arrived upon the summit we could see the enemy in hasty retreat on the east side of Bull Pasture Mountain, about five miles in advance. It being late in the day, our command thought it prudent to halt and go into camp for the night.

At sunrise the next morning we were again on the line of march in pursuit of the enemy. When we arrived at Bull Pasture Mountain we ascended to its summit, when Ashby's scouts reported that the Yankees had placed four pieces of artillery on the road leading into McDowell, on the west side of the mountain, where the road passes through a narrow gorge. The heights commanding Monterey were also in possession of the enemy, with artillery planted.

The Lee Battery, of Lynchburgh, was selected to go in advance with its rifled guns, but after reaching the summit of the mountain they were ordered back. Gens. Jackson and Johnson deciding that no position could be obtained.

Johnson's army (that is, the infantry) was placed upon the top of the mountain. After the Generals had reconnoitered for several hours, it becoming late, they concluded to postpone an attack until the following morning, but the enemy, receiving reinforcements, made an attack upon us about 5 o'clock. After a desperate fight, which lasted about five hours, we drove the enemy from the field.

During the engagement Gen. Johnson came near being captured. Gen. Jackson, not knowing his position, gave orders for the Forty-fourth Virginia Regiment to fall back, but the Richmond Zouaves, Capt. Alfriend, seeing the perilous position of their brave commander, Gen. Johnson, disobeyed orders and charged upon the enemy, thereby saving him from the Yankee clutches.

Our loss is estimated at about 300 killed, wounded and missing. About 100 of the number were killed or mortally wounded.

During the battle Gen. Johnson's horse was killed under him, and the General received a wound in the ankle from a shell, passing through the small bone of the leg.

The Twelfth Georgia regiment did most of the fighting, and suffered very severely. They lost 182 killed, wounded and missing; among them were many brave and gallant officers. One company of the Twelfth Georgia lost all of its officers save the Fourth Corporal.

There were only two brigades of three regiments each, both of Johnson's army, engaged in the fight. The first was commanded by Col. Z. T. Connor, of Georgia, and the second by Col. Wm. C. Scott, of Virginia, of both of whom Gen. Johnson speaks in the highest terms for their gallantry and bravery on this occasion.

We expected to renew the fight the next morning; but the bird had flown, leaving behind, at McDowell, where three thousand encamped, all his camp equipage, a large quantity of ammunition, a number of cases of Enfield rifles, together with about a hundred head of cattle, which they had stolen, being mostly milk cows.

At McDowell, Milroy's headquarters, great destruction was done to private property.

The Yankees had been enjoying themselves finely. They had er

Military Movements—Gen. Mitchel and Col. Leavenworth.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

DENVER, Colorado Territory, Saturday, May 17, 1862.

There has been a little excitement in military circles here within the past few weeks, and it may not be improper to tell the story for the benefit of the public.

Everybody knows how the First Regiment Colorado Volunteers went to New-Mexico; how our Rocky Mountain boys met the Texan Rangers at Apache Pass; and how the secession brigands, notwithstanding their vast superiority of numbers, fled in confusion before the miners of Colorado. Well, Gov. CONNELLY, of New-Mexico, seeing the abilities of our boys, and knowing how powerless the Mexican population was for purposes of defence, very naturally desired to import a little more fighting material from our mountains. With this object, he commissioned Mr. A. H. MAYER as Major of the Fourth Regiment New-Mexico Volunteers, and ordered him to this Territory to recruit. Maj. MAYER had been widely and favorably known here in the riotous times of 1860, as a leader of the friends of law and order.

The Governor of Colorado promptly gave his consent to the recruiting being carried on; and hosts of our very best men flocked to the Major's standard. Among his officers were Capts. HALL and GREEN, both old pioneers, and Capt. BARGER, formerly of the Military Committee in the United States House of Representatives. Everything went on well; and a corps was being organized out of the most splendid material that ever the sun shone upon. Now comes the pith of the story.

Col. LEAVENWORTH was expected here to raise the Second Regiment, Colorado Volunteers. The Colonel, be it understood, had delayed his coming for nearly four months, after receiving his commission. His regiment is to be used in protecting the Overland Mail route. Now a great many of our citizens expected commissions; and a great many more hoped to make fortunes out of contracts for the Second. It did not at all suit these patriotic people that men should be raised in this Territory for the purpose of saving a sister Territory from destruction. It did not suit them that troops should be taken away to be fed and clothed and contracted for by somebody else. So they produced a tremendous uproar, and howled frantically around Major MAYER, who paid just about as much attention to them as a lion would pay to the howling of jackals.

At length, however, an order was obtained from the General commanding the Department of Kansas, virtually suspending the recruiting service. Then occurred the coolest thing which has ever occurred among the cool airs of these mountains. The psuedo friends of Col. LEAVENWORTH demanded that all Maj. MAYER's recruits should be transferred to the Second Regiment. In plain words, they wanted some hundreds of brave fellows who had enlisted specially to go to New-Mexico, and in raising whom, five weeks of toil and tireless energy had been spent, to be transferred, against their will, under the command of men who had never lifted a finger in the cause.

It is scarcely necessary to add, that they did not get the men, and will not. Maj. MAYER is an officer of too much personal pluck for that. He is just the man for this frontier—cool, brave, and rightly-judging in all things, he has the full confidence of his officers and men. He will give a good account of himself wherever he may be placed. X.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

The Sporting Season.

A TROT ON THE FASHION COURSE.

The trot announced to take place on this course yesterday afternoon for a purse of $100, mile heats, and for which there were five horses entered, did not come off. The weather about mid-day was heavy and threatening, and the fall of a smart shower of rain about the usual hour of departure for the track from the City, caused many of the regular frequenters of the course to absent themselves. The attendance was, consequently, very limited, but the manager, determined to keep faith with the public and the owners of horses, hung up the purse in the judge's stand. The rain having somewhat cleared off, the horses were called upon to come up to start, when it appeared that out of the five horses entered, one only, the Lady Emma, put in an appearance.

Of the others, it was alleged that TALLMAN's entry, Jilt, was lame, having gone amiss the preceding morning at exercise. Another, James Lynch, was in a similar condition, while the owners of the other two, What Is It and Nimble Dick, evidently thought that they would have no possible chance of success in such superior company as the two-mile victress of Jilt, and preferred letting them remain in the stable, rather than encounter certain defeat. The race, consequently, fell through, and although an attempt was made to match Nimble Dick in harness against Lady Emma to a 150-pound wagon, for $500 a side, so as to prevent the visitors being disappointed at not seeing a race, yet it ended only in failure. The manager liberally offered to give the gate-money to the winner of a match between any two good horses there, so as to afford a little sport, but could not succeed in his object.

In the double-team race which comes off on Monday next, for a $200 purse, mile heats, it will be seen from the advertisement in another column, that TALLMAN's entry, Panic and Jilt, are withdrawn. This will have the effect of rendering the race more equal and more exciting.

Fine Arts.

OTTO STIETZ, an artist residing in Chicago, has made for the LaCrosse and Milwaukee Packet Line, and the Buffalo and Milwaukee Propeller Line, a couple of glass embossings, which exceed in beauty and perfection of portraiture anything of the kind ever seen. One is a picture of the propeller Charles Ensign, the other of the steamboat W. F. Davidson. They are etched upon plate-glass with acid, into which is put gold and silver bullion, presenting, when finished, in the case of the propeller, a fac-simile of a first-class lake-boat, with sails and spars, ropes and windows, planks and nail-heads, smoke and water, to the very life; while in the other is seen the picture of a regular Mississippi steamboat, low cut, cotton laden, darkies, windows, smoke-pipe and wheel, as in the thing itself. He has also made for the LaCrosse, Milwaukee and St. Paul Road, a train of cars, with engine, tender, freight and express cars, which seem as if cut out of solid gold and placed upon the surface of the glass.

As curious works of art, these are well worth examining. They are on exhibition at the office of the Company, No. 254 Broadway, where they attract a great deal of attention.

Bonnat's gallery in SCHAUS' Gallery, a large landscape in which old Italian ruins figure conspicuously. As with all of his works, the composition is well nigh perfect, while comparatively little attention is paid to the finish.

Hamilton E. Towle Against the Great Eastern.

Yesterday a motion was made before Judge BETTS, at Chambers, by HOWLAND & ASPINWALL, consignees of the Great Eastern, through their counsel, WM. M. EVARTS, to reduce the amount of security required to insure the release of the vessel, and enable her to proceed on her voyage, or to dismiss the case entirely. In support of the latter proposition, the Chief Engineer and other officers of the vessel testified that the services of Mr. TOWLE were of no such value as alleged. Judge BETTS was to decide the motion at 10 o'clock last night. The motion was opposed by Judge BURNETT.

The Ladies' Relief Association of the Park Barracks.

The Ladies' Relief Association of the Park Barracks acknowledge the receipt of a large donation of shoes from Messrs. BENEDICT & HALL. A case containing supplies of various sorts from Hillsborough, Vermont. A box from the Tenth Ward School, and numerous donations of fruits, wines, jellies, clothing, &c., from various sources; all of which have proved most useful, and have been thankfully received by those on whom they were bestowed.

It has been deemed expedient for this association to extend its care to the hospital on Bedloe's Island. Until within the last ten days the sick and wounded in this hospital had received no aid from any private association, and although, supplied with all the necessaries, had not enjoyed the comforts provided for those who have been brought to the City.

The Ladies' Relief Association, of the Barracks, has determined to share with the hospital at Bedloe's Island, the stores, clothing, &c., sent to it, believing that the public, who have thus far so generously anticipated its wants, will not fail to supply this additional demand.

The gratitude evinced by the men at this hospital, on the first visit of the ladies, was truly touching. They said, "Now we shall be made comfortable, for the ladies have come to us."

The articles most needed at Bedloe's Island are old garments, dressing gowns, slippers, and shirts. All articles may be sent to the Barracks, or information, as if specially required for the Island, to be so marked at the Barracks. Outside garments are especially needed. Dressing gowns have been received thus far than of anything else. Many of the men come to the City in a most ragged condition; outside clothing is the most expensive, and it has not been thought proper to devote any of the funds to purchasing it. At this season of the year, many housekeepers must have on hand large supplies of clothing which they will be glad to dispose of when it may be done so agreeably to themselves and so advantageously to those for whom it is asked. Books and pamphlets will be acceptable. The present store of wines and jellies will probably suffice for some days, but the Association asks that its request for outside garments may not be disregarded.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

THE ITALIAN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AND THE GIRLS' LODGING HOUSE—JOLLIFICATION, GINGER SNAPS, &c., &c.—The children of the Italian Industrial School under the superintendence of Mr. AGOSTINO E. CERQUA, paid their compliments to the newly-established Girls' Lodging House, on Thursday evening. A magic-lantern exhibition added to the pleasures of the evening, and such hearty laughter was induced by the merry show that appetites were fairly set on edge for the rare feast of cakes and iced lemonade which ensued. The members of the Children's Aid Society, who were present, saw to it that none lacked in participation of these delicacies, which, as a general thing, constituted unattainable temptations upon corner fruit-stands, and never to be indulged in at the individual expense of those who now, with unrestrained sociability, luxuriated thereupon. After each had partaken to their heart's content, and to a colic-threatening extent, three times three were given for the Loding-house, and for the considerate friends who had planned this pleasant entertainment for them. A circle of interested observers was present, and appropriate remarks were made by Mr. MACY and others. Some first-rate music formed a main attraction of the evening, and the manner in which these Italian-born children rendered the "Garibaldi March" and other national airs was inspiriting to the fullest degree. By invitation of Mr. and Mrs. TROTT, Superintendents of the Lodging-house, a most satisfactory reconnoissance of the premises, dormitories, &c., took place, the children moving in an orderly manner through each apartment. After this all re-gathered in the spacious reception room, where a song of congratulation from the little Italians was responded to by the transient dwellers in the Lodging-house with the beautiful and suggestive parting hymn, "Heaven is our Home."

DEPARTURE OF THE GREAT EASTERN.—This monster steamer sails for Liverpool at 7 o'clock this morning, it being necessary for her to leave at that early hour in order to enable her to pass over the bar. She takes a full cargo of freight and about 450 passengers. She has been visited by nearly 3,000 persons daily, since she has been ready for inspection. Her present trip to New-York has proved in every respect a success. The departure of the vessel at the time fixed upon came near being prevented by the failure of the sureties to justify on the bond of $100,000, arising out of the suit of HAMILTON E. TOWLE, who, it will be recollected, libeled the steamer on her arrival at this port. She was not released from the hands of the Marshal until last evening, when Mr. WM. M. EVARTS, the counsel for the consignees, stipulated with Judge BIRDSEYE, counsel for the libelant, that the sureties would justify to-day, whereupon an order was issued for her release. A motion was made before Judge BETTS, at Chambers yesterday afternoon, for a reduction of the amount of the bond, but the Judge not being prepared to give his decision before to-day, the above stipulation was made in order to enable the steamer to sail at the time specified.

RELEASE OF PRISONERS FROM FORT LAFAYETTE.—By order of the Secretary of the Navy, twenty-four foreigners, comprising officers and crew of the steamer Ella Warley, formerly called the Isabel, which was captured in attempting to run the blockade of Charleston with a cargo of arms and ammunition from Nassau, were, yesterday, released from Fort Lafayettee by United States Marshal MURRAY. The Captain, first officer and engineers of the steamer being citizens of the United States, are retained as prisoners. Hereafter persons captured in attempting to run the blockade will be held subject to the order of the Secretary of the Navy, and all who can establish the fact that they are not citizens, and all passengers, native or foreign, who have not been engaged in any way in aiding the rebellion, will be discharged. Persons captured by the gunboats willl continue to be held subject to the orders of the Secretary of War as heretofore.

ARREST OF A HOTEL THIEF.—A notorious hotel thief, named JOHN MILLER, alias James Brown, was arrested yesterday upon the charge of having broken into room No. 126, at the Astor House, and rifled a trunk of the sum of $79 in gold, belonging to a Cuban. He was arrested soon after by the Police of the Third Precinct, and taken to the Tombs, where Justice BRENNAN committed him for examination. Capt. MOUNT searched MILLER's person, and found upon him the whole of the stolen money, also the sum of $170 in Treasury Notes, a diamond breastpin, a diamond finger ring, and several other articles of jewelry. The Police say they have the means of knowing that all of the property found has been stolen.

CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER.—PETER HIRSCHFELDT and FREDERICK SNYDER, two German bakers, residing in West Thirtieth-street, were arrested, yesterday, by the Police of the Twentieth Precinct, upon the charge of having caused the death of JOHN QUIGG, by shooting him with a pistol. The affair took place several days ago, and was fully reported at the time. QUIGG died yesterday, and Coroner COLLIN, held an inquest upon the body.

DANGEROUS COUNTERFEITS.—A large number of arrests were made on Thursday night and yesterday, of parties who are charged with having passed counterfeit $3 bills upon the City Bank of Williamsburgh. Five of the arrested parties were committed to prison, yesterday, by Justice QUACKENBUSH. The bills are new, finely executed, and well calculated to deceive good judges.

ANXIETY ABOUT THE TWENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.—A good deal of anxiety was felt in this City yesterday, by the friends of the Twenty-fifth Regiment New-York Volunteers, which is reported to have been badly cut up in the recent fight at Hanover Court-house, Va. This regiment was raised by Hon. JAMES KERRIGAN, M. C., principally from the Fourth, Sixth and Fourteenth Wards.

YEARLY MEETING OF FRIENDS.—The yearly meeting of the Orthodox Friends will be held in this City next week. On Sunday morning LUCRETIA MOTT will speak at the Friend's Meeting-house in Fifteenth-street, and in the afternoon at Brooklyn.

DONATION TO THE LADIES' HOME FOR SICK SOLDIERS.—The Union Defence Committee have bestowed $1,000 upon this institution, located at the corner of Lexington-avenue and Fifty-first-street.

LAW REPORTS.

United States District Court.

Before Judge Smalley.

The United States vs. Fifteen Virginia Bonds, &c.—When the testimony in this case, which was brought to forfeit the property, because its owner, Mr. Guthrey, was going to transport it South, was closed, the Judge directed the jury to find a verdict for the claimant, because the act under which the information was filed, was not applicable to such evidences of debt as these bonds, &c., and moreover there was not sufficient evidence that this property was proceeding from this State to the rebel States.

On application to the District-Attorney, however, he ordered a certificate of probable cause for the seizure to be given.

The property was delivered to the claimant.

Failure to Prove Title.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Monell.

Greene et al. Ex'rs, &c., vs. James C. Willet, Sheriff, and James R. Brady.—The plaintiffs, as executors of Daniel G. Tuttle, claimed possession of personal property levied upon by the sheriff under an execution, in which defendant, Brady, was plaintiff, and one Elisha Carpenter, defendant. Plaintiffs claimed that Carpenter sold the property to one Spratley, a lawyer, and that Spratley afterward sold it to Tuttle. Tuttle died soon after commencing this action, which was continued by his executors. Defendants denied the good faith of the sales and that the cause could not be continued in the name of the executors, plaintiffs having failed to prove passage of title from Spratley to Tuttle prior to the levy. The Court dismissed the complaint on motion of defendant's counsel.

Cushing, Garvan & Pinckney for plaintiffs; John McKeon for defendant Brady; A. J. Vanderpool for defendant Willet.

Important to Merchants—Rights of Joint Debtors.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Berry vs. Kelly, Sheriff, Ketchum et al.—Ketchum & Son, on the 6th of February, 1861, as creditors of Carroll & Mead, who had suspended payment, caused an attachment to be issued against that firm, consisting of three persons, upon the ground that the members thereof were all non-residents. On the same day the Sheriff levied the attachment on the partnership stock. On the 7th of February the plaintiff bought all of the stock of Carroll & Mead, the sellers agreeing to deduct from the purchase price whatever might be necessary to discharge the lien of the attachment, which they intended to contest. On the 16th of March the attachment was set aside as to one of the defendants, but the Sheriff retained his levy on the partnership stock. Judgment was perfected against all of the defendants, and the Sheriff sold the attached property in parcels to different purchasers. The plaintiff, on the issues coming on for trial, claims that after the attachment was set aside as to one of the partners, it could only hold the individual interest of the other two partners, and as the firm was insolvent, he is entitled to the value of the property as to the whole of the proceeds of the Sheriff's sale. The defendants contend that the principle involved by the plaintiff does not apply when the attachment is issued against one partner for the partnership debt. The case was recently before Chief-Justice Bosworth on a motion for a receiver of the fund pending the action; the motion was denied upon the ground that there was no allegation that the fund was in danger, but the Chief Justice, in his opinion, remarked that "the property being actually attached upon a partnership debt, and sold to satisfy it, it makes a case within the equity of the statute as to executions on a judgment in an action against partners when only a part of them are served with process." The question, in view of the distinction contended for, is a new one, and important to partnerships having a non-resident copartner, as well as to their creditors. Decision reserved.

A. F. Smith for plaintiff; J. N. Bangs for Ketchum & Son; A. J. Vanderpool for Sheriff.

The Law Institute and Edwin James, Esq.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Mr. James will appear in person, assisted by Mr. James T. Brady, this morning, to answer the charges of the Committee of the Law Institute. It is understood that the only question which will be argued will be that concerning the alienage of Mr. James.

Court of General Sessions.

Before Judge McCunn.

The special plea put in by counsel for Robert W. Butler, indicted for violation of the concert-saloon law, which was demurred to by the District Attorney and was to have been argued yesterday, was postponed till Monday, when, by stipulation of counsel, written points will be presented on both sides, and the case submitted without argument.

A driver of a Fourth-avenue car, named Williams, was convicted of reckless and furious driving, but recommended to the mercy of the Court by the jury.

Two courtezans, named Mary Johnson and Anne Wilson, were tried for stealing a watch and a sum of money from a man who made the complaint under the assumed name of Samuel C. Smith, and who is said to be an editor of a paper in Tompkins County, this State. On his cross-examination, the witness said that his real name was not Smith, whereupon counsel for defendants claimed an acquittal on the ground of variance between the indictment and the facts as proved, a point which the Court sustained, and the jury were directed to acquit accordingly.

The Grand Jury brought into Court a large number of indictments, among them one against the Corporation of the City of New-York for permitting a nuisance in the Sixth Ward. Said nuisance is alleged to consist in willfully neglecting the sewers of that ward, and suffering large quantities of "earth, dirt, old clothing, slops, filth, water, dead dogs, cats and divers other unwholesome, obnoxious and dangerous substances to accumulate therein." The penalty for the City's harboring a nuisance of this kind, if convicted, is a fine in the discretion of the Court. Among other indictments were one against a gambling-house at No. 575 Broadway, kept by Jas. E. Kelly, James Turner and Geo. Smith, and one against a similar establishment at No. 23 Laurens-street, kept by Henry Smith.

FRIDAY, May 30—P. M.

The indications, yesterday, of a renewed advance in Government Securities were more than confirmed, to-day, by the very strong demand for U. S. 6 ℘ cents of 1881, the 7.30 ℘ cent. Treasury Bonds, and the 6 ℘ cent. Certificates of 1863. The business in these Stocks at the principal Money offices on the Street was much larger than at the Stock Exchange Board; the upward tendency of the market creating quite an excitement among the Money Brokers. This afternoon, 105¾ ℘ cent. was the quotations for Treasury Bonds, and 105 ℘ cent. for United States 6 ℘ cent. coupon Stock of 1881. The advance from yesterday is nearly or quite 1 ℘ cent., and the rise from the early to the closing sales of the day about ¾ ℘ cent. The certificates of Treasury indebtedness, 6 ℘ cent., payable in 1863, were scarce on the Street, and 100¾ ℘ cent. would probably have been paid at the close for a round amount. The State Securities were also firm, and generally higher than yesterday, both South and North. In reference to New-York State Stocks, which are scarce in the market, Thompson's Reporter says that "it is understood that New-York will pay the $900,000 due June 1, next Monday, in gold; and on the 1st of July, $800,000, and all State interest on its direct debt—also in gold. This will disburse about $2,250,000 in five weeks on State account. It is also understood that the State war debt, issued in June, 1861, at one year, will be paid in currency. This being a debt for account of the Federal Government, the State feels no moral obligation to pay anything better than Government currency."

The Stock Market early in the day was barely steady at the prices current yesterday afternoon, except on Pacific Mail, which was ¼@½ ℘ cent. firmer, but soon after the breaking up of the early Board, an improved feeling was manifested on the Street, and the bidding was quite spirited on New-York Central and Erie, at a rise of ¼@½ ℘ cent. At the Second Board the demand was still stronger, and the advance equal to ¼@½ ℘ cent. on the prices of the forenoon, partly in sympathy with the buoyancy in Government securities. New-York Central brought 87½, and Erie 36½ ℘ cent. Erie Preferred and some of the Western shares were even higher in proportion, Toledo selling at 42½, as against 41¾ at the early Board. Pacific rose to 113½ ℘ cent., and Panama to 132 ℘ cent. Later in the afternoon the general market showed increased buoyancy both on the Share and Bank list, and at 4½ o'clock the following were about the current bids:

N. Y. Central	77⅜	Illinois Central	60⅞
Erie	36½	Pacific	114
Erie Preferred	63	Panama	132
Rock Island	61	Missouris	51⅜
Toledo	43	Tennessees	58½
Michigan Central	61¼	U. S. 6s, 1881	105
Michigan Southern	24	7-30 Treas. Bonds	105⅜
Michigan Guarant'd	55¼	Gold	103¾

There is another decided improvement in the City Bank Shares. The bids to-day are 1 ℘ cent. higher on Merchants' Exchange, 4 ℘ cent. on Seventh Ward and Leather Manufacturers, 1½ on State of New-York, 1 ℘ cent. on Pacific and North America, and 3 ℘ cent. on Merchants' and Manufacturers':

The bidding for the Railway Mortgages is also firmer, and on most descriptions higher than yesterday:

The price of Gold was a fraction higher than at the close of yesterday, but Exchange continued 114¼@114¾ ℘ cent., with a fair business done for the mails of Saturday. Gold left off 103¾ @103¾ ℘ cent. Money easy at 4@5 ℘ cent. at call, and 4½@6 ℘ cent. on prime Merchant paper, 60 days to six months. The demand at Bank is so moderate that some of the larger establishments are looking around for United States Stocks and Treasury Bonds and Certificates at current rates. The Sub-Treasury has received from the Department at Washington $1,000,000 in United States Notes of the smaller denominations, which are much needed in making payments at the New-York office. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued the annexed circular in regard to mutilated Treasury Notes:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, May 18, 1862.

To guard against frauds upon the Government and to secure the just rights of holders, the following rules for the redemption of mutilated United States notes are hereby established:

RULES.

First—Mutilated notes, which have been torn, no matter how much, but of which it is evident that all the fragments are returned; or defaced, no matter how badly, but certainly satisfactorily genuine, will be redeemed at their full face value on presentation.

Second—Fragments of notes will be redeemed in full only when accompanied by an affidavit stating the cause and manner of the mutilation, and that the missing part of the note is totally destroyed. The good character of the affiant must, also, be fully vouched by the officer before whom the affidavit is taken.

Third—In the absence of such affidavit, fragments of notes will not be paid in full, but the parts presented will be redeemed in their proportion to the whole note; reckoning, as a general rule by twenties.

Fourth—Less than half of a note will not be redeemed, except by payment of the full value of the note under the second rule; or by payment of the proportional value of the missing part, when presented under the fifth rule.

Fifth—Fragments of notes, for which less than the full face value has been paid, will be retained for a year, to the end that the owners, who have received less than the value of a full note, may have opportunity to return the missing part, and receive the amount previously withheld.

Sixth—Until further order, mutilated notes and fragments will be redeemed only at the Treasury of the United States, at Washington; whither they can be sent, addressed to the "Treasurer of the United States," by mail, free of postage. A draft on the Assistant-Treasurer at New-York, for the amount allowed, will be returned, in the same way, to the address of the person remitting the same.

Secretary of the Treasury.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Gen. HALLECK's combinations against the rebels at Corinth have proved too much for them, and they have evacuated the position—last ditch and all. The dispatches published by us yesterday announced that three strong reconnoitering columns of our army advanced on Wednesday morning from the right, centre and left, to "feel" the enemy, and to unmask his batteries. The enemy, it appears, hotly contested our advance at each point, but was driven back with considerable loss. Gen. POPE's column, on the left, encountered the strongest opposition, and our loss there was twenty-five killed and wounded, while the enemy left thirty dead on the field. The fighting was renewed on Thursday morning, Gen. POPE's heavy batteries opening upon the enemy's works, from the advanced batteries of which he soon drove the rebels. Gen. SHERMAN in the course of the day also established a heavy battery at only one thousand yards' distance; and early yesterday morning skirmishing parties were advanced in all directions. Three of our divisions soon occupied the enemy's intrenchments, about a mile from Corinth, which was soon discovered to be in flames, and the enemy falling back. Our troops immediately pushed forward, and Gen. POPE's advance, the Thirty-ninth Ohio, occupied the town, and planted the "Old Glory" on the Court-house. The enemy, it appears, evacuated the place during Thursday night, and retreated down the railroad toward Mobile—one report states, to take up a new position at Okolona, about sixty miles below on the railroad. Gen. HALLECK seems to be in doubt about the enemy's movements, accounts being, he says, conflicting. He is of opinion that the rebels are in strong force on our left flank, some four or five miles south of Corinth, but of course on the railroad. He has doubtless taken measures to ascertain the truth, which we shall all learn in good time.

A summary of some of the events which preceded the evacuation somewhat more remotely, may not be uninteresting. On the 19th inst., the Eighth Missouri Regiment had a sharp fight over a fine spring of water, about two and a half miles from Corinth. The spring was taken and retaken three times, but finally remained in possession of the Missouri Eighth. The possession of the spring cut off a very important supply of water from the rebel army. Sharp skirmishes were had on the 20th and 21st, which resulted in driving in the rebel pickets and advancing the Union forces. The Sixty-fourth Ohio charged upon Block House, held by the enemy, took it and burned it. The First, Second and Twentieth Kentucky and Thirty-ninth Indiana had several skirmishes, in which the First Kentucky lost nine killed. On the 22d, CRITTENDEN's Division had a smart brush, with what result has not been learned. On the 21st POPE's Division drove in the rebel pickets, and took possession of a hill two and a half miles from Corinth, planting heavy siege guns on it. This hill commands the town entirely, and its possession was a very important advantage, which doubtless did much to induce the final evacuation. Every step forward taken by Gen. HALLECK seems to have been taken with a certainty of holding the position gained.

The United States steam transport Jersey Blue, Capt. JACKAWAY, arrived at this port last evening, from Newbern, N. C., on the 28th inst., bringing sixty passengers, sick and wounded, from the Burnside Expedition. She brings no news. The United States steam transports Cossack and Virginia would sail in a day or two for this port, the former with prisoners. We receive by the Jersey Blue a letter from our special correspondent with Gen. BURNSIDE's army, embodying a list of Union prisoners confined at Salisbury, N. C., but who are about to be released by the rebel authorities.

The Baltimore American says that the bridges on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad were destroyed, on Tuesday, by the rebel soldiers—the Opequan bridge, two miles east of Martinsburgh, a wooden structure one hundred yards long, and the Pillow bridge, also wooden, two hundred yards long, to the east of Martinsburgh. The telegraph operator at Martinsburgh escaped with his instruments. It is understood that the railroad track has not been disturbed. The Western train goes no further than Harper's Ferry.

A gentleman of high position and intelligence, who is a resident of Memphis, arrived in Louisville on Tuesday, en route to Cincinnati. He has been a political refugee since January, and his object in visiting the vicinity of Memphis at this time was to communicate with his family. He has been a heavy loser through the confiscation of property. One item of his loss was three hundred hogsheads of sugar, and another seven hundred barrels of molasses. He reports the country about Memphis full of deserters from BEAUREGARD's army. The conscription act is exciting great indignation among soldiers and citizens, and is working happily for the Union cause. People denounce it as an act of atrocious despotism and fatal to liberty. In Memphis great destitution prevails in regard to almost all the necessaries of life. Salt sells at eighty dollars a sack. Flour at thirty-five dollars a barrel. Bacon and wretched beef at forty cents per pound. Many of the citizens of Memphis have fled to the country to avert the operation of the conscription act, and are encamping in retired rural localities.

The chains, ordnance and stores captured from the rebels at Columbus, when that place was evacuated, are estimated to be worth $100,000. Measures have been taken to remove the property to Cairo.

CONGRESS.

Only one branch of Congress was in session yesterday—the Senate. In that body, after the presentation of various petitions, the bill for the better organization of the Adjutant-General's Department was reported from the Military Committee, but was not acted upon. The Secretary of War was asked to communicate to the Senate a copy of the official report of Gen. HOOKER, relating to the late battle of Williamsburgh. A copy of the correspondence with the War Department, on the subject of the imprisonment of soldiers in the Penitentiary of the District, was called for. The Tax bill was again taken up, at 1 o'clock, and debated until the adjournment. Very little progress was made upon the bill.

GENERAL NEWS.

We have received by the Uranie, which arrived at this port last night, files of Buenos Ayres papers to the 10th of April, but they contain no news not already published. The first news of probable war between England and the United States caused great depression of business among American and British shipping. The latter was not more able to obtain freights than American; and the Swedish, Danish, French and other vessels in Montevideo, if were taken up at high rates for Europe and elsewhere, as soon as they arrived in port,—in some instances before they had commenced to discharge their inward cargoes. Mr. HELPER, the Buenos Ayres Consul appointed by President LINCOLN, was reported to have arrived at Montevideo when the Uranie left. Several American vessels had changed owners at ports on the River Plate, and were loading under Buenos Ayrean and Montevidean colors.

The urgency with which troops were called for by Secretary STANTON, after the recent disaster in the Shenandoah Valley, may be inferred from the following dispatch, sent to the Governor of Vermont:

Intelligence from various quarters leaves no doubt that the enemy in great force are advancing on Washington. You will please organize and forward immediately all the volunteers and militia force in your State.

(Signed,) E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

The Shelbyville (Tenn.) News, of the 23d, says, that on the previous Friday night, near New-Market, Alabama, A. L. STAMPS, of Shelbyville, who had gone thence to remove to Shelbyville, in wagons, a lot of cotton purchased by him, was captured by STEARNS' cavalry, and his wagons and cotton burnt. Mr. STAMPS, together with GILBERT WYNN, JACKSON MADDOX and TARLTON WILLIAMS, who were also captured, were conveyed under a heavy escort to Chattanooga. The charge brought against Mr. STAMPS was that he was a Lincolnite, and engaged in buying cotton for purposes inimical to the interests of the Southern Confederacy. All of this is entirely false. Mr. STAMPS was purchasing the cotton for the factory of Messrs. GOSLING & Co., of Shelbyville.

A private letter from an officer in Gen. POPE's corps d'armée, dated May 20, says: "Night before last two hundred and fifty rebels came out of the woods from toward Corinth in order to give themselves up to us. Our Grand Guard could not see that they had no guns, and so they let them get up pretty close and then fired a volley into them, killing and wounding at least half."

A disastrous fire occurred in Rochester on Thursday morning, destroying the Whitney Elevator, which contained at the time 40,000 bushels of grain. The loss in machinery, etc., will be $45,000, and in grain $30,000. On the former there is an insurance of $15,000, and on the latter of $14,000.

The Stock Market was 1 per cent. higher on Government Securities, and ¼ per cent. on the Railway Shares, yesterday, the market closing with considerable buoyancy on the Army news from the Southwest. Gold, 103¾, Exchange, 114½ @114¾ per cent.

Flour was depressed, and prices were a shade lower yesterday. Sound lots of Wheat were in good demand for export, and were firm. Corn was more sought after, and was dearer. Groceries were less active, as were also Whisky, Tallow, Hay, Fruit, Hides and Leather: Provisions were in moderate request. Pork declined. A pretty fair business was reported in Foreign Liquors, Dry Goods, Hops, Fire Crackers, Tobacco and Spirits Turpentine. Cotton was brisker and firmer. The freight engagements were heavier, but at reduced rates. The changes in other branches of trade were not important.

The Opening of the Ports and the Outcome of Cotton.

To-morrow being the 1st of June, from which date the President's proclamation opening the ports of New-Orleans, Beaufort, N. C., and Port Royal, S. C., takes effect, the blockade which has been established at those ports for the past twelvemonth ceases with to-day, and they stand open henceforth for free commercial intercourse with the world—contraband of war excepted. A number of enterprising shippers and merchants have already put up cargoes and taken out licenses, under the regulations prescribed by Secretary CHASE in his Circular; and Uncle Sam's war-dogs will hardly be withdrawn from their long watch ere argosies freighted with articles of use, of medicine, and of luxury, to which Southern eyes have for months been strangers, will sail into those harbors and take in exchange cargoes of those staples for which our European friends do so pine. Our late files of the French and English journals are filled with speculations as to a possible relaxation of the blockade, which appears to have been diplomatically forthshadowed in London and Paris; and the capture of New-Orleans was chiefly interesting to them as bearing upon this all-important question. The President's proclamation, which has now been received at the other side of the Atlantic, has, however, decided the matter, and without doubt the intelligence has been received with the liveliest satisfaction. It only remains now that the vessels that go in search of the new golden fleece shall be successful in obtaining their cargoes. And for this it is necessary, first, that the cotton shall not have been destroyed, and secondly, that the planters shall be willing to sell. We have very little doubt that both the fact and the disposition will prove satisfactory. Wild fictions have reached us of the burning of cotton along the Mississippi as our flotilla pushed up. Doubtless a certain quantity has been consumed, but it has been the work of Confederate soldiery specially charged with this "patriotic" task, and we have yet to receive evidence that a single planter has either burned his cotton or suffered it to be burned, if he could help it. Already cotton begins to reach New-Orleans from Plaquemine, and our latest advices report the arrival of more from up river. Now that the blockade is raised, we shall see what the effect of the cargoes our merchants may take down will be in inducing the forthcoming of the flocculent fiber.

The Evacuation of Corinth.

It is safe to say the news of the rebels having evacuated Corinth was as little expected as was that of the evacuation of Yorktown. At Corinth had been located one of the very last ditches of the insurrection. There, with as numerous a throng of traitors as could ever be brought together, in a position possessing every natural advantage in addition to the most elaborate defensive works, and surrounded by approaches of peculiar difficulty, it was reckoned confidently, North and South, that one of the two decisive battles of the war would have to be fought, and that doubts as to the relative force and martial characteristics of the antagonists would require no further solution. The force under Gen. BEAUREGARD has been rated at various figures. A moderate estimate derived from others of much larger proportions, would seem to justify a belief that at least one hundred and thirty thousand men were behind the lines of Corinth. The ablest Generals in the rebel service—BEAUREGARD, BRAGG, HARDEE, POLK, and VAN DORN, to say nothing of BRECKINRIDGE—were at the head of the several divisions; men who, beyond mere military skill and experience, possessed the entire confidence of their soldiers. All these conditions turned the odds of the apparently impending conflict in favor of the rebels, who had an additional incentive to desperate resistance in the circumstance that the fate of Memphis and the Mississippi River was dependent on the result. Yet all these arguments for a great fight have been spoiled by the event. The rebels have retired, not in the direction of Memphis, or to a position where the possession of the river might still be disputed, but to a point at the Southeast, which is simply a step in the direction of further retreat. The war in the West is ended. The Mississippi Valley is in possession of the Union. The entire region to the west, from Texas northward, can offer no further resistance to the National arms. Forts Wright and Randolph must fall with the fall of Corinth. The theatre of war is narrowed to the southeastern angle of the Republic. And it is almost certain that, in thus abandoning the Southwestern States, all of the rebel army which was drafted from that section will abandon the flag of BEAUREGARD in a body.

It is also more than probable that the retreat is the development of some new policy arranged by BEAUREGARD during his recent visit to Richmond, if, indeed, policy rather than necessity has dictated the move. What the new-fangled scheme of action may be is left to conjecture. There seems to be but a sorry choice at the option of the rebels. They may propose to draw the Union army further Southward, where the climate may do the work of destruction from which they shrink. This is, at best, a hopeless plan—a plan savoring rather of malignant despair, than of any well-grounded hope of eventual triumph. For there is no end to the mischief threatening their cause from thus courting a distribution and encampment of Union armies among the negroes of the Gulf States; while it is absolutely certain that the troops of Gen. HALLECK can never be in a vicinity or circumstances less wholesome than those from which the rebel escapade has just released them. The only other conceivable motive for the retirement is that a concentration of the remaining strength is proposed in Northwestern Georgia, a region steadily looked to by Confederate strategists as the decisive and final battle-ground of the war. If this be the plan, we may reasonably expect the evacuation of Virginia to follow that of Corinth, and to see a new position taken at Chattanooga, Dalton or Atlanta, where the scattered forces of the insurrection shall be concentrated for a conclusive struggle. A second alternative—namely, the transfer of BEAUREGARD's army to Virginia—is too remote from possibility to be entertained. The fate of Virginia, if not already settled, will certainly be so, before the demoralized horde of BEAUREGARD could traverse Alabama.

While the less immediate consequences of this measure are thus open to guesswork, there are other points which are not in the least problematical. 1. The rebels, even when sheltered by a complete chain of intrenchments, protected by heavy artillery, and placed beyond the reach of those scapegoats of Southern cowardice, the gunboats, decline to meet an equal force of National troops. The approach of Gen. HALLECK to the very face of their lines failed to provoke a sally or repulse; and by the time that commander discovered that nothing short of a general assault would unearth the enemy, the enemy took to flight. So much for the soldiership of the chivalry. 2. The perfect wisdom of a slow and sure policy is splendidly vindicated. As did McCLELLAN at Yorktown, and as he is again doing before Richmond, HALLECK has routed the enemy, less by an impetuous and murderous attack, than by the thoroughness of his preparations, which had become so formidable, and in fact, so obviously irresistible, as to leave the rebels the choice between retreat and annihilation. In a contest between exhausted and exhaustless resources, delay always fights on the side of the latter. When hereafter the policy of masterly preparation is called in question, it will be a sufficient vindication to point to Yorktown and Corinth; an argument which in a very few days will be strengthened by the addition of Richmond.

Cotton and Confederate Bonds—Rebel Financiering.

It has been about one year since Mr. MEMMINGER, of South Carolina, who was intrusted with the management of the Confederate finances, presented to the world his first scheme for a war loan. The amount called for was not great, the interest offered was liberal, and the security regarded, by Confederates, at least, as most ample—being nothing less than a tax on all the cotton to be shipped from the prolific South to all parts of the cotton-consuming world. It occurred to us at the time, and probably to many other much brighter financiers, that it was not wise to pledge all of the money that the Confederate Government expected to raise from the cotton monopoly, to sustain the credit of their first loan, and that by no means a large loan. It was possible that other loans would be needed, and further securities wanted. Would the cotton tax be pledged again? Second mortgages are never as good as first mortgages. At least such has been the estimation of financiers heretofore. It may have been, perhaps it was, reserved to Mr. MEMMINGER to establish the contrary principle. It must be granted he has come amazingly near it, in his treatment of cotton as the security of his Confederate bonds.

We shall not try to fathom the profundity of Mr. MEMMINGER's financial skill. We know that he published his scheme, fixed his interest, pledged his cotton, opened his subscription books, and exhorted all Confederate patriots who had as small sums as $50 to spare, to rush forward while the doors were open, and get a share of this capital investment. To make it more attractive, the Financial Secretary gravely announced that the half-yearly installments of interest would be payable "in all the Southern cities." It puzzled many, at the time, trying to find out how a treasury could be sustained in such omnipresent readiness to pay—but the problem was meekly resigned to time and MEMMINGER. We do not learn that the latter has ever been embarrassed by the supposed difficulty.

There should have been no trouble in obtaining the loan that the Confederate Secretary advertised for; and we were most frequently and authentically informed there was not. At every point where books were opened, crowds flocked in and set down shares, until exhausted agents cried, "hold—enough!" At every city more was subscribed than had been allotted to that particular locality; and then the rebel Government, true to its chivalric and illustrious regard for "poor people," issued a rescript that in scaling the columns of figures that incumbered the subscription books, "preference should be given to the subscribers of small amounts." Bless the charitable souls. "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." That this injunction of the Government was observed we may rest assured. Indeed, we remember, with a distinct sense of the keen rebuke thereby administered to us, that several Southern journals recorded the fact with sarcastic glee, that a number of thrifty slaves in Alabama had planked down their small piles of cash and taken Confederate bonds therefor. What will be the consternation, by the way, of these dusky rebels, to find that the Congress of the United States, instead of regarding each one of them as "a friend and a brother," has confiscated their wealth of Confederate paper and reduced them to the impoverished level of their masters? We will not dwell on this distressing phase of Confederate finances, but refer the perplexing anomaly to the Special Committees on Confiscation.

We return from this digression. We have seen the first war loan advertised, by Mr. MEMMINGER, promptly subscribed for, three times over. The first bond issued at Montgomery brought a high premium—ten per cent., we believe—and made the fortunate purchaser quite as famous as the first Jenny Lind ticket made GENIN. We regret we cannot revive his name. Bonds became more common after awhile, and no particular distinction attached to their ownership. They brought no more premiums—or anything else that we ever heard of. The demand somewhat slackened with the supply; and to the amazement of the world, the rebel newspapers of New-Orleans that had announced the loan as all taken—that had pleasantly derided a disappointed agent of the ROTHSCHILDS, who, they said, had come to New-Orleans to take several millions of the Confederate loan, and had been denied because there was not enough to supply the craving of their own citizens—these papers, after a time, published an urgent appeal from Mr. MEMMINGER, that New-Orleans should take the amount of loan allotted to her! And this appeal was backed by significant admonitions to those who withheld moral and pecuniary aid to the rebellion, that proved to be more persuasive than the eight per cent. interest, or the cotton guaranty of the bonds themselves. We conclude that the loan was made up, sooner or later.

But, what more? The cotton-planters, finding that their staple was rising rapidly in value, did not export any to Europe. Why should it not increase in their own hands, rather than in the hands of Yankees or Europeans? It answered a good purpose at home in buoying up the Confederate bonds. If it could only, at the same time, be made to support the planter in his usual affluence, it would answer all the ends of its growers, and the Confederates would be reckoned more happy than Jack in Mother Goose, who could not "eat his cake and keep it." The planters, therefore, proposed to Mr. MEMMINGER that the Confederate Government should buy all their cotton, or half at least; or, at any rate, "advance" something on it. Specious thought of your true Southron! Memories of Yankee advances on "next year's crop" no doubt unconsciously prompted the suggestion. But MEMMINGER nipped the hope of the planters, as an untimely frost sometimes nips cotton. He entered into a metaphysical disquisition on the powers and duties of a State, and concluded that cotton-buying or money-lending was not in the line of Confederate business. He referred the planters to the banks of the South, and suggested the practicability of getting advances on their cotton from them. We hope they did.

But we approach the last appearance of cotton on the stage. The Confederate Government pledged the export tax on cotton to give credit to their bonds. They next forbade the shipment of cotton to the ports from which it might be exported. They next refused to buy what they had used as a security, and had paralyzed in the hands of its owners. They next encouraged the owners to borrow money on it, as they had already borrowed money on it. And, now, at last, having used it as security themselves, and induced their citizens so to use it, the Confederate Government has ordered all the cotton to be burnt. The chief losers are supposed to be the holders of Confederate bonds, and those rebel banks and capitalists that have made "advances" upon the staple. There is a story in the West of a Dutchman that had been swindled by illegal issues of a wild-cat banker, going to his bank in a rage and indignantly burning his worthless notes before its door. Of a like vindictive character is the order of the Confederate Government to destroy all the securities existing of the debts due to their own unhappy people.

What will be Mr. MEMMINGER's reply now to the holders of coupons attached to his very desirable Confederate bonds? These coupons, like the bonds, are payable at "all the Southern cities." Will he have them presented at Mobile, at Nashville, at Norfolk, or New-Orleans? Or will he give them the showman's latitude: "You pays your money and you takes your choice?"

The Alleged Protection of Rebel Property.

We have two classes of accounts from our grand army in Virginia, differing widely in the emotions they excite, but so closely allied to each other that it is surprising that one does not explain the other, to every thoughtful mind. The following is a sample of one class:

"The morale and vigor of the army of the Potomac are equal to those of any army in the world. * * * The condition of the troops in passing through Virginia, bears probably, a favorable contrast to the rebel army, in the minds of the people, as does also the course which has been pursued by the military authorities generally."

Such a dispatch as this which was sent by the Associated Press reporter on Friday, from our army in front of Richmond, was calculated to give pleasure to loyal men throughout the Union, and to inspire confidence both in our soldiers and in their leaders. The feeling produced by such information is, that an army so orderly, so disciplined and self-possessed, is equal to its task in the critical position it occupies, in the heart of the enemy's country, and face to face with its powerful foe. The "morale" has need to be good. The "vigor" has need to be unrelaxed. The esprit du corps has need to be equal to that of the army of the enemy—and better, if possible. The result will probably be so much better for us, by just so much as we excel the enemy in the qualities of a perfect soldiery.

But there is another class of reports from this army of ours in Virginia, and one which we published in the TIMES of Saturday may serve as a specimen of all. It reads thus:

"Our soldiers are astonished, and I confess I am a little inclined that way, to understand why the Government protects the property of notorious rebels, who embrace every opportunity to make their sentiments known in the heart of our camps; but such is the case. Before the rebel army, Union men were forced to fly from their homes, their properties devastated, their lands confiscated or sequestered for their devotion to our Government; consigned to exile and poverty for the crime of Unionism. They look for retribution upon the head of their oppressors. They look in vain! * * * * It may be policy to protect the property of our enemy, keeping the horrors of war which they have created, away from their doors, but I do not believe in it!"

And many others do not believe in it. And when they read letters from which such extracts as the above are taken, they are apt to wax wroth against Gen. McCLELLAN, or the Administration, and denounce such forbearance as trifling with the National cause, and as dealing with treason in gloves. And, like as not, the men who were most forward to enjoy and boastfully proclaim the compliment, in the one case, paid to "the morale and vigor of our army," will be found the extremest and harshest in their censure of the course pursued by our Government in the other case.

But does not every one see how the one state of things depends on the other, as cause does upon effect? How are the "morale and vigor" of an army maintained? Only by the enforcement of the most rigid discipline—by confining men to camp lines, by the prevention of straggling, by daily and hourly exercise of vigilance in the condition of their arms and accoutrements, by constant preparedness to answer the call of their officers, without incumbrance, to battle or to march, as the case may be. All this is incompatible with the practice of property snatching. An army, as such, knows nothing but the army of the enemy that it is led against.

All the complaint, therefore, of the leniency of our Generals in the treatment of rebel property, results from an entire misapprehension of the reason of it. The mistake is great to suppose that it is an undue regard for the rights or feelings of rebels that causes the action complained of. It is "the morale and vigor" of our own army that our Generals consult when they forbid the marauding of our soldiers, and the devastation or spoliation of the property of the country they pass through. There is no occasion for our soldiers to plunder in order to obtain supplies of food or clothing, for the Government adequately provides for all such wants. If plunder be for private gain, then is it doubly dangerous, for it not only breaks down discipline while the plundering is going on, but it encumbers the soldier with goods that he will divide his attention with, giving so much less to his main business in the field—that of fighting.

Whether for present wants or for future use, it is evidently not necessary nor politic to let our army marching through an enemy's country become marauders. To hold that they might justly be allowed to commit depredations on rebel citizens, because rebel soldiers have glutted their vengeance upon Unionists, is to take not a very elevated view of our duty, either as statesmen or moralists. The question is, Is it right to imitate an enemy in the grossness and ferocity of his passions? And will it not injure "the morale and vigor" of our army more than it will weaken the enemy, to give license to the covetous or revengeful passions of our soldiery? We do not scalp Indians, nor burn and torture Indian captives taken in war, because they commit such deeds in their warfare against us. Why should we degrade ourselves in a war against rebellion to the lowest level that rebels seek? War is lawless enough at best, and if license were once given to our army to despoil "notorious rebels" on their march, we might feel sure that the inquisition into the political sentiments of the resident population of the South would not be the most reliable; but that whoever possessed what an eager soldiery desired would invariably be found to be "notorious rebels."

We conclude, therefore, that Gen. McCLELLAN's course in Virginia, in regard to the protection of private property, is wise and salutary. It keeps up "the morale and vigor" of our army, and these traits preserve for that army the confidence of the country. Whatever of the enemy's property falls into our possession is required to be turned over to a Government receiver, and thus the rights of the nation are maintained, while the discipline and honor of the army are preserved, and with these its safety.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The Importance of the Successes Recently Gained by Gen. McClellan.

Speech of Senator Harris on the Tax Bill.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 30.

The Associated Press dispatches ventured to rebuke the independent papers of the country last night, in the name of the Government, for their criticisms of the late blunders of the War Department. These dispatches are understood to be official, and may truly represent all the members of the Cabinet, but this is doubted here; but when the Agent of the Associated Press declares that "All friends of the Government in Washington" deplore your criticisms on the War Department, he states more than the facts will warrant. Last Monday's criticism on the War Department, I know, met with almost universal sympathy and applause in Washington. It is held that Mr. STANTON's dispatch North, that the rebels were actually "marching on Washington," was sensational, wholly unfounded, and highly injurious; but having by that alarm got a large military force offered, it is considered a false step to countermand their enlistment and disband them. We may want them, so as to be prepared for any emergency. "Friends of the Government" in Washington do not object to criticisms on hysterical Cabinet Ministers.

SENATOR HARRIS ON THE TAX-BILL.

The speech of Senator HARRIS, of New-York, to-day, excites profound surprise. It is widely discussed, and very harshly criticised. Many declaring that it cannot correctly represent the sentiment of the great State of New-York. How is it?

GEN. M'CLELLAN'S SUCCESS.

The Star, of this evening, has the following:

"A day or two since, we intimated that the recent action at Hanover Court-house, Va., was of great importance in the effect of its results upon Gen. McCLELLAN's operations immediately in front of Richmond. We had reference to the entire destruction of the rail communication from Richmond, north and east, likely to grow out of it. Already we have news of that achievement. The Fredericksburgh and Richmond Railroad bridge, five hundred feet long across the South Anna, has been completely destroyed by our Sixth Cavalry, and Richmond is therefore wholly cut off from Fredericksburgh, Gordonsville, the Piedmont region, the valley, and Western Virginia, mouth of the James River—that is, of the only means of communication that can be available to the rebels for any transportation of men, munitions, or provisions. This success will be likely to force the rebels to fight before Richmond, if not before disposed to do so, as it greatly circumscribes their means of retreating from their capital. It also threatens them with speedy starvation, as three-fourths of the food of their army doubtless necessarily came to them via Staunton, Charlottesville and Gordonsville."

THE EMANCIPATION COMMISSION.

JOHN M. BROADHEAD, of the District of Columbia, has been appointed by the President one of the Commissioners, under the act for the emancipation of slaves in the District of Columbia, in place of Mr. VINTON, deceased.

FUGITIVE SLAVES.

The Circuit Court to-day formally refused a writ of habeas corpus for the discharge of an alleged fugitive slave. Subscriptions of money are being pledged to employ eminent counsel to test the legality of the application of the Fugitive Slave law to the District of Columbia before the Supreme Court of the United States. The claimant of the female slave recently arrested from Marshal LAMON by the military authorities, is about entering a suit against him for the recovery of the value of the woman.

Of some eleven hundred contrabands who have been quartered at Duff Green's Row, east of the Capitol, only one has expressed a desire to return to Slavery. Many have objected to situations in Maryland, Delaware or any Slave State. None of those from Virginia have been delivered to their masters. Several from Maryland having been fully identified, and belonging to loyal men, have been returned. The quarters are frequently visited by masters in search of their chattels, but Gen. WADSWORTH permits none to be taken off without a hearing. Those now remaining are principally women and children. The latter of every hue from coal black to nearly white. Besides the men and lads sent to work on Arlington farm, many others have been placed in situations where they will obtain fair wages and good treatment. The conduct of some of the Maryland masters who have lately visited the quarters, has shown them to be filled with enmity to the Government, though professed Unionists. One openly asserted to-day, that the masters should surround the building, take all the negroes, and if the National troops interfered, shoot them like dogs.

CAPTURES BY THE BLOCKADING FLEET.

On the 12th inst. the United States steamer Hatteras captured the rebel steamer Gov. A. Mouton in Berwick Bay, bound there from Sabine Pass. She was loaded with "Confederate" Government provisions.

Also, on the 1st inst., the rebel schooner Magnolia, while attempting to leave Berwick Bay. She was loaded with cotton and turpentine—252 bales of the former.

On the 6th inst. the same United States steamer chased on shore the rebel steamer Fashion, also loaded with cotton and turpentine. She was there fired by her own crew.

THE TARIFF BILL.

The Committee of Ways and Means will not completely frame their Tariff bill until that for laying internal taxes shall have been disposed of, as the policy is to lay on foreign products the same rates as those imposed on domestic articles of similar character.

PRISONERS.

Among the very large number of prisoners of war here now, is a cousin of BEAUREGARD, brought in to-day. Several Secessionists, citizens of Georgetown, [illegible] from "Dixie," were placed in strict to-day for refusing the guard, and otherwise attempting to create disturbance.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

The municipal election, which occurs on Monday, is the topic of lively discussion, and is exciting general and intense interest, from the fact that the candidates are believed to fairly represent the conditional and unconditional Union sentiment. Mayor WALLACE will have the cordial support of the true Union men of all parties, and his defeat would at this time be a national calamity. His opponent, though professedly in favor of crushing the rebellion, has approved the Vallandigham address, and is the candidate of all who oppose the Administration and openly or covertly comfort the secessionists. Every enemy of the Government would rejoice at his success.

TORE DOWN A FLAG.

A Secessionist in the person of a drygoods clerk, last night tore down the American flag in the fair held by members of Dr. PINKNEY'S Church, recently closed by the Provost Marshal. He was arrested to-day and lodged in the guard-house.

ARRESTS IN NEW-YORK FOR SLAVE-TRADING.

The Secretary of the Interior responds to a resolution of the Senate, for information relative to persons who have been arrested in the Southern District of New-York, from the 1st of MAY, 1861, to the 1st of May, 1862, charged with being engaged in the Slave-trade, with the names and number of vessels arrested and bonded, charged with being engaged in that traffic. Forty-one persons are named, none of whom were convicted, as their bonds were forfeited, which ranged from $250 to $20,000. In some cases, they were tried and acquitted, one or two escaped, but most of the cases are marked "Bond not forfeited—complaint dismissed." The number of vessels is forty-six.

THE CABINET IN SESSION.

The Cabinet is in session this evening.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

THE EXCITEMENT SUBSIDING — GOV. ANDREW'S PROCLAMATION—SECESH DEMONSTRATIONS IN WASHINGTON—"CONFISCATION" AND "EMANCIPATION"—COL. JENNISON RESTORED TO HIS COMMAND—HE WILL LEAD AN EXPEDITION SOUTH.

WASHINGTON, Monday Evening, May 26, 1862.

Last night we went to bed in great confusion of mind, believing that BANKS was in danger and had met with severe losses, fearing even for Washington itself; this evening we are reassured. The dispatch from the General is cheerful and not at all apprehensive; he has had no losses, except those of rest and position. We haven't seen anything yet of JOE JOHNSTON'S banners beyond the Potomac, or heard the blast of his bugle summoning the city to unconditional surrender. Again, "nobody is hurt."

But some of us have been terribly scared. Among them is Gov. ANDREW, of Massachusetts, if one may judge from his hair-on-end Proclamation. It is admirably Southern in style; he must have been studying rebel manifestoes till he has unconsciously caught the spirit. I have no hesitation in giving a critical opinion that, as a writer of proclamations, he surpasses PICKENS, and nearly equals Mayor MONROE. The "wily and barbarous hordes" is very effective, but I am sorry to say, that it is copied from a Southern source, and did duty in a Memphis newspaper a year ago. He may have succeeded in getting the "whole active militia" of Massachusetts congregated on Boston Common "to-morrow," but if so, it will be the most extraordinary feat ever achieved, even by the Yankees of the good old Bay State. We all know what a magnificent stretch of country Boston Common embraces, (in Boston eyes,) and yet I would, if I dare, doubt his getting all his militia within its limit; and certainly, if he can do it in twenty-four hours, we will trust him to bring them here in another day, and take Richmond on the third.

Somebody else, however, must have been scared besides Gov. ANDREW; for it is evident that he has had a dispatch from the President, which must have informed him of the fact he affirms, that the enemy "are marching on Washington." Isn't it possible, after all, that the whole affair is one of Uncle Abe's dry jokes, intended to inspire JACKSON with the notion that we are all frightened to death, and that Washington is at his mercy, in order to coax him to thrust his cunning old head into a trap, from which it cannot again be withdrawn? We all know how the President enjoys a jest; and wouldn't it be such a sell to cut off the sly old rebel while he is chasing the Yankee boys across the Potomac?—the latter all the while laughing at the fun. I think, on the whole, I shall adopt this as my theory of the affair; it will explain the President's mysterious visit to Fredericksburgh on Friday, make Gov. ANDREW'S proclamation in character, and throw the laugh on the rebels.

In describing the feeling here last evening, I did not quite do justice to the secesh. They were jubilant; and, what is more, did not take pains to conceal it. It was wonderful how they swarmed at WILLARD'S; warmed into life by the news of a National reverse, as rattlesnakes come out from their holes to bask in the sunshine. This morning, their elation had subsided somewhat, though I saw one person bold enough to walk Pennsylvania-avenue with a Confederate badge on his breast. To-night they are comparatively quiet; victims of a misplaced confidence, they have ceased to hope for the immediate advent of JEFF. DAVIS, and have again hid themselves under robes of pretended loyalty.

With regard to the causes of this repulse, it is hardly worth while to speculate. The weakening of Gen. BANKS' force to strengthen Gen. MCDOWELL was seriously protested against by the former; but the President frankly assumes the responsibility of the act, and doubtless had the best of reasons.

The whole time of the House to-day was occupied with the questions of "confiscation" and "emancipation." The former measure was indorsed—the latter condemned. There was no debate; all was voting. I should not say all the time of the House, however, for they found a few moments at the close of the session to pass the Senate bill giving to ROBERT SMALL and his associates—the gallant captors of the steamer Planter—a share of the prize-money earned.

The matter of Col. JENNISON is arranged. The President is satisfied of the groundlessness of the charges against him, and insists on his remaining in the service. The following document speaks for itself:

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, May 26, 1862.

Brigadier-General W. Scott Ketchum, Acting Inspector-General, St. Louis, Mo.:

GENERAL: The President desires that Col. CHARLES R. JENNISON, of the Seventh Kansas Volunteers, may remain in the service, with the rank of Colonel.

If his resignation has been accepted, you are directed to muster him into his original position, as Colonel of the Seventh Kansas Volunteers, to date from the day of original muster.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
L. THOMAS, Adjutant-General.

It is understood that Col. JENNISON will be put immediately in command of a brigade, to operate in Western Arkansas and the Indian Territory—one special duty being to restore to their homes the loyal Indians driven out by PIKE last Winter, and to give them protection against their enemies. The actual promotion of Col. JENNISON is temporarily delayed, for reasons satisfactory to him.

The action of the Government, in taking possession of the railroads, has interfered a little with our travel and mails. We have no train this evening from the north, and no train has gone north since early morning. This derangement cannot continue long.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 30.

Mr. CLARK, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) presented a petition of JAMES F. SIMMONS, asking indemnification for an alleged seizure of a vessel and cargo.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) presented the petition of ELIZA DIGGS, a female slave, who is owned in the District of Columbia, but hired out in Maryland, and her owner has not placed her name in the list of those to be emancipated under the act.

Mr. WILSON, from the Military Committee, reported back the bill for the better organization of the Adjutant-General's Department.

Mr. THE EVIL, of New-Jersey, (Rep.,) offered a resolution that the Secretary of War communicate to the Senate a copy of the official report of Gen. HOOKER relating to the recent battle at Williamsburgh.

Also a resolution that the Committee on Public Lands inquire into the expediency of donating lands for the benefit of Antiquarian societies.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, offered a resolution that the Secretary of the Interior communicate to the Senate a copy of the correspondence with the War Department on the subject of the imprisonment of soldiers in the penitentiary of the District, and also a copy of the opinion of the Attorney-General on the subject. He said he understood there were 70 or 80 soldiers imprisoned in the penitentiary here.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Rep.,) sent to the Clerk's desk to be read a dispatch concerning the evacuation of Corinth.

The bill donating lands for the benefit of an Agricultural College, &c., was taken up and discussed till 1 o'clock, when the Tax bill was taken up.

Mr. CLARK, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) suggested that they should try to finish the Tax bill this week.

Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) did not see any necessity for extraordinary haste on the Tax bill. Congress was not bound to adjourn at any particular time, and he did not think that Congress ought to adjourn in the present condition of things, and leave the post of duty. He was opposed to any pushing the bill through by night sessions.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) was also opposed to any haste. There were very important principles to be considered.

Mr. DIXON, of Connecticut, (Rep.,) spoke in favor of early action on the Tax bill. Congress had been in session six months, and during the whole period the people had been demanding a tax bill. Why delay it longer than is requisite for wise and considerate action. As to the necessity of Congress remaining in session, he believed that if the public business was properly finished, the adjournment of Congress would be a relief to the country.

Mr. SIMMONS moved to amend the tax on whisky so as to make it 25 cents until the 1st of January, 1863, and after that 35 cents a gallon.

Mr. SHERMAN opposed the amendment as being too high a tax on one article, and would operate injuriously on the agricultural interest.

Mr. HARRIS, of New-York, (Rep.,) said he had some difficulty to know how to vote. His people were willing and anxious to have a proper tax bill. He had heard various stories about the great debt of the country, and never believed them. He had made some inquiries, and found that the whole debt of the country, at the 1st of July, would not vary $5,000,000 from what the Treasurer estimated, which was $577,000,000. He had also heard a great deal about a great debt to the army, but found on inquiry that the army had been paid up to the first of the present month. The money is in the hands of the Paymasters.

Mr. FESSENDEN said at the extra session and this session, we had appropriated $535,000,000, and over, and last March we made the regular appropriation, not less than $65,000,000, and the debt was then $120,000,000. He thought, taking all the odds and ends, the debt, at the 1st of July, would be about $720,000,000.

Mr. HARRIS said he would assume that expenditures would go on, and the debt become $1,000,000,000. That was certainly enough to satisfy anybody. He thought this bill was calculated to raise more than was actually needed to pay the current expenses of the Government and the interest on the debt, and a small sinking fund. He was willing to vote every dollar that was necessary, but no more, to add to the already heavy load on the people.

The discussion was continued by Messrs. CHANDLER and MCDOUGAL, the latter speaking at length upon the merits of the bill, and contending for the superiority of the substitute proposed by him, as raising a sufficient revenue and taxing only those things which are legitimate subjects of taxation, while the bill from the House proposed to lay a tax on everything which should be encouraged and advanced, and not loaded with taxes, and by a great mass of machinery and detail renders itself practically useless and inoperative.

Mr. TRUMBULL moved to adjourn. Rejected. Yeas, (Messrs. Browning, Harris, King, Saulsbury, Sumner, Trumbull, Wade, Wilmot,) 8; nays, 28.

Mr. SIMMONS' amendment was then rejected. Yeas, 15; nays, 21.

Mr. CHANDLER moved to adjourn.

On a vote being taken no quorum was present.

Mr. FOOTE moved that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to notify the absent members that their presence was required to perform public business.

Mr. TRUMBULL hoped not. He thought nothing would be gained.

Adjourned.

Amusements.

MISS MADELINE HENRIQUES' BENEFIT.—One of the most popular and charming actresses on the New-York stage takes her first benefit on any stage this evening, at Wallack's Theatre. DOUGLAS JERROLD'S comedy of "Time Works Wonders," will be produced for the occasion. This play has not been produced in this City for some time, and is almost as good as new. Independent of this, Miss HENRIQUES' popularity will inevitably attract, as she deserves, a crowded house.

MISS BATEMAN'S BENEFIT.—Miss BATEMAN makes her last appearance at the Winter Garden this evening. The close of her engagement—one of the most popular ever played on the New-York boards—is selected for her benefit. Her mother's tragedy of "Geraldine" will be performed, Miss BATEMAN sustaining the part of the heroine. In addition to this attraction Mme. SERAKOSCH, Mlle. CARLOTTA PATTI, Mr. E. MOLLENHAUER and Master WILLIE BARNSMORE PAPE have volunteered their valuable services.

Personal.

Hon. J. E. BOULIGNEY, Member of Congress from New-Orleans, left the Fifth-avenue Hotel, yesterday, for Washington. He was tendered a serenade at his hotel on Thursday evening, but was obliged to decline on account of ill health and the necessity of an early departure for Washington.

[Communicated.]

Dr. Hunter on Colds, Catarrh and Ozena.

LETTER NO. TWO.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: In considering the causes which gradually undermine the strength of the lungs and produce consumption, I shall begin with colds, as these are, of all causes, the most important. When we are exposed to wet feet, to drafts of air, to sleeping in damp sheets, or to insufficient clothing, a sense of chilliness is experienced, followed by oppression of some of the organs of the body. This is a "cold." It may be slight and soon pass off, or severe and end in fatal inflammation. Much depends on the importance of the part on which it falls, for a cold always manifests itself in the oppression of some one organ, and any organ in the body may be its seat.

We distinguish colds by the part affected. Hence, we have a "cold in the head," or Influenza—a "cold in the nose," or Catarrh—a "cold in the throat," or Quinsy—a "cold in the chest," or Bronchitis.

By a Catarrh is meant a congested and inflamed condition of the mucous membrane lining the nostrils, generally produced by colds, but often caused by dust and other irritating matters in the air. We breathe through the nose, hence its mucous membrane is more liable than any other part to injury from sudden changes in the temperature of the air, and from irritating and noxious impurities floating in it. In nine cases out of every ten the first indication of our having taken cold is a sense of stuffing in the nose. The mucous membrane swells until it completely closes the passage. If we now examine the lining of the nostrils we find it red, puffed up, and very irritable. Attempt to force the air through the nose and the effort excites sneezing. This is Acute Catarrh, of all affections the most common and the least regarded. Most persons have two or three such attacks every year, but rarely think it necessary to do anything for its removal.

Chronic catarrh follows the acute form, and is generally the direct consequence of leaving a "simple cold in the head" to cure itself. After a longer or shorter time, the liability to attacks of acute catarrh become increased, and the patient finds that after it has passed off there still remains a discharge of yellow mucus. This is chronic catarrh. On looking into the nose we now find the membrane thickened, redder than in health, and often ulcerated. Chronic catarrh occurs in several forms. In the simplest form we have merely an accumulation of yellow or straw-colored mucus in the posterior nares above and behind the palate, which the patient "hawks" out from time to time during the day. In the second, small sores form in the nose, and the secretion becomes dry, requiring almost constant "picking at it" to keep it free. In the third, a false membrane forms in the nostrils, which the patient removes from time to time. Not unfrequently the membrane is bloody where it has been torn from points of ulceration within the nose. In the fourth, the secretion is thin and drops down into the throat whenever the patient throws back the head or forcibly "snuffs up" the air. When the ulcerations are considerable, the secretion becomes purulent. There is, too, often loss of smell, and, when the ulceration has eaten through the membrane to the bone, the discharge has an offensive odor.

Catarrh occurs at all ages, being found in young children and in old age. Those suffering from it are much more liable to take cold on slight exposure. It is much worse in the Autumn and Winter than during the warm months of Summer. The best season for its successful treatment is the Summer, because there is less liability to relapse from taking fresh colds.

INFLUENZA is catarrh of the frontal sinuses. There are two considerable cavities in the frontal bone just above the root of the nose. If you place your hand over the forehead, between and slightly above the eyebrows, you will feel the elevation in the bone over these cavities. They are very large in some persons, and I have in my office a skull for illustration, in which they will contain an ounce of fluid. The frontal sinuses are lined by mucous membrane, the same as the nose, and are connected with the nasal cavity by a short duct. When the patient suffers from catarrh, the disease is liable to extend along this duct to the frontal sinus producing headache, and that distress over the region of the forehead which is known as influenza.

OZENA is only another name for a very bad form of chronic catarrh of the nose, occurring in an unhealthy constitution. When the health is injured and the vitality of the system broken down, all local diseases are liable to take an aggravated character. Not unfrequently ozena is produced by a vitiated state of the blood caused by dissipation. From whatever cause it arises it is a most serious affection, for if it be not arrested it will assuredly go on to the destruction of the bones of the nose, and may end fatally by extension to the brain.

TREATMENT.—Chronic catarrhal affections of the nose and frontal sinuses, until a very recent period, had no remedy. They remained like consumption and asthma, a stain and reproach on the page of medicine. And yet, strange as it may seem, the disease itself, if we except ozena, is only a simple chronic inflammation of the mucous membrane, and can easily be reached by all the forces of the Materia Medica—solids, fluids and gases. Physicians failed because they never earnestly and rationally strove to succeed. They were satisfied with squirting a little warm water into the nostrils from a straight syringe, and perhaps the prescription of an alterative by the stomach, which, of course, did no good. Some years since, finding it impossible to effect the cure of these affections by such means, I contrived a curved showering syringe by which I was able to make a direct application of any medicated wash to the whole internal cavity of the nostrils at the same instant. By daily cleansing the inflamed membrane, and strengthening it by astringent applications, I soon found that catarrh was among our most curable affections. In the more aggravated cases of ozena and chronic influenza, I sometimes found the cure hastened by snuffing up certain vapors, which could not be applied equally well as a wash, and to meet this requirement I contrived a small copper sand bath, to be used with a spirit-lamp. The medicines are placed upon a glass crystal, and evaporated by heat. The patient holds his head over the bath, and receives the vapors, as they come off, into his nostrils. There is neither pain nor inconvenience in using these remedies. Even little children submit to them from day to day, without complaint. By this, the only simple, direct and rational treatment ever prescribed for catarrh, I have been able with certainty to break up these troublesome and dangerous affections where every other means had failed. When properly applied, the showering syringe and vapor bath will not fail in one case in a thousand.

Unfortunately, these affections are too generally treated with neglect, and in consequence are soon lost sight of in the disastrous diseases to which they give rise. Catarrh is the first step toward consumption. It goes on until it involves the throat in granulations, causes the voice to become husky in reading aloud, and ends in thickening of the mucous membrane lining the bronchial tubes. After this latter change has taken place we have the deposition of the tubercles, ulceration of the lungs, and the full development of consumption as an almost inevitable consequence. Even were the danger to the lungs less the public do not require to be told that catarrh is the most common source of deafness from causing the closure of the Eustachian tubes, and that it frequently extends itself down the gullet to the stomach, causing the most inveterate form of dyspepsia. Chronic irritations of the mucous membrane always commence above and extend themselves downward. They are mild and easily cured in the commencement, but become grave and dangerous when neglected. I regard catarrh as the great feeder of pulmonary irritation, and by no other means can we so effectually guard the lungs from disease as by removing the catarrhal affection.

My next letter will be on Affections of the Throat.

Your obedient servant,
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,
Physician for Pulmonary Diseases,

COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c.

DR. D. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT has been for thirty years the standard remedy.

RECENT COUGHS and COLDS, PLEURITIC PAINS, &c., are quickly and effectually cured by its diaphoretic, soothing and expectorant powder.

ASTHMA it always cures. It overcomes the spasmodic contraction of the air vessels, and by producing free expectoration, at once removes all difficulty of breathing.

BRONCHITIS readily yields to the Expectorant. It subdues the inflammation which extends through the wind tubes, produces free expectoration, and suppresses at once the cough and pain.

CONSUMPTION.—For this insidious and fatal disease no remedy on earth has ever been found so effectual. It subdues the inflammation, relieves the cough and pain, and removes the difficulty of breathing, and produces an easy expectoration, whereby all irritating and obstructing matters are removed from the lungs.

WHOOPING COUGH is promptly relieved by this Expectorant. It shortens the duration of the diseases one-half, and greatly mitigates the sufferings of the patient.

In all PULMONARY COMPLAINTS, in CROUP, PLEURISY, &c., it will be found to be prompt, safe, pleasant and reliable.

Sold by HEGEMAN & CO., Broadway, and by Druggists generally.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES.—DR. THIERS' Office, No. 1,217 Broadway, New-York.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without a single instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without fail in the most inveterate effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, and hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by lawyers, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. But a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

FROM HARPER'S FERRY.

PARTIAL LIST OF THE LOSSES.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HARPER'S FERRY, Thursday, May 29, 1862.

I heard from eye-witnesses some interesting incidents of Gen. BANKS' retreat from Strasburgh; among them, for example, a woman in Williamsport shooting three of our men from her window as they passed through the street, and then being shot dead herself by the Captain of the men, when he could forbear no longer; but events succeed so rapidly, and so change their locality, that the facts and places which have made the pulse of the whole nation bound a few days ago, are now old and almost rubbed out of the memory. Yet a single word. The story the public has been told of the rebel flag of truce to throw Col. KENLY off his guard, and to get within pistol shot of him, and the black flag, is confirmed to my satisfaction. The number of the regiment returned up to Tuesday, as I was told by a person I would not hesitate to trust in ordinary matters, is so incredibly small that I cannot repeat it without comment. Forty-five is the number given. The disaster has had the effect to fire, not to dampen, the spirit of the friends of the brave fallen of the First Maryland. One hundred and fifty men were recruited in Baltimore on Tuesday, and I am informed the regiment now numbers 900 men. Col. KENLY's brother came up here yesterday on his way to endeavor to get possession of his brother's body. He believed that the Colonel was ruthlessly murdered in the ambulance to which he had been carried wounded.

Two civilians, who accompanied the retreat of Gen. BANKS, told me that from Strasburgh to Winchester it was something of a rout, but that afterwards all was in good order. The rebels followed to about two miles this side of Martinsburgh, and had forces lying in ambush in the woods on both sides of the way, firing upon our troops as they passed, almost the entire distance. It is denied that the loss of the fifty wagons is attributable at all to the panic among the negro teamsters. The rebels waited in ambush until the train had nearly passed, and then dashed out upon the rear portion, or near the rear, some of the extreme rear escaping.

I betake me now to current events and interests.

The magnificent wooded, rock-ribbed hills, environing us here, are put to the base use of covering rebels, principally cavalry, in unguessed numbers. A few nights ago, lights were seen along the ridge of Loudon Heights, rising rugged and perpendicular across the Shenandoah, directly opposite and close to our village. One or two small forts are erected, although no batteriess have yet been planted, and two companies of First Maryland Home Brigade, sent up Tuesday night to hunt the guerrillas out, were set upon by a party of Ashby's Cavalry—as is supposed—from ambush, and made to fly, with the loss of Sergt. MEHRLING, killed, and with bullet holes through caps and clothes of other men. Our men were at the disadvantage of knowing nothing of the roads and paths, even in the daytime, and they were caught as they were going through a cut in the hill, and fired down upon from both sides of the road at once. A heavy battery occasionally throws a shell into the woods of Loudon Heights, and sometimes rebels are seen running through the woods like disturbed rats, thereat.

I have cause to know that a vigilant eye is kept out after spies in this camp. Yesterday a sergeant, accompanied with two men carrying fixed bayonets, tapped your correspondent on the shoulder and said, "Look here, I want you to go with me," and marched me off three blocks to the Provost Marshal's office. The official there began to question me. I asked him what was the object of his questions. He informed me that they had orders to "arrest all suspicious-looking persons!" I suggested that my passes would answer his purpose, perhaps. He looked at them, pronounced them sufficient, explained the necessity for the rigidity, that the place was full of spies, and I bowed myself out, minus any apology for being virtually called a suspicious-looking person. At least six times that day, in the field, on road and in street, I was stopped and examined. This morning, however, I felt somewhat recompensed for my yesterday's experience in seeing another of your correspondents, Mr. ARMSTRONG, and a correspondent of the Herald, Mr. EVERETT, brought in prisoners into the presence of the General commanding the post as spies! "Misery loves company!" And the glory of the fun was, they were not possessed of any military pass, or any kind of document of which the General could take official cognisance, and he coolly informed Mr. ARMSTRONG if his private letters were not genuine, he should hang him! They wanted to go on further to Gen. BANKS; but here they were obliged to stay and give me their company for a few hours. Civilians are not expected to understand these things, and I'll not stop to explain. There is something in being a monopolist of a little knowledge.

Everything is quiet here this morning. The enemy that menaced us yesterday, has apparently stopped to think whether it is best.

Gen. BANKS is in good spirits. His troops ditto, and well recovered from their late fatigue. J. E.

FROM WILLIAMSPORT.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSPORT, Wedesday, May 28.

It is anything but gratifying to the correspondent, who labors and toils day and night to obtain and lay before the country the earliest and most important news of the war, to know that his reports are considered contraband by somebody, and consequently suppressed. Comment upon this course, however, is unnecessary, as the readers of the Associated Press reports are now aware of what has been concealed concerning this column, and can properly estimate the leading causes of the disastrous retreat from the Valley of Virginia. It is no longer contraband to state that, from the hour of recall from the pursuit of JACKSON beyond Harrisonburgh, and the "gobbling up" of all Gen. BANKS' army except two small infantry brigades, fourteen guns, and two regiments of comparatively inexperienced cavalry, that every officer was firmly imbued with the belief that, should JACKSON and EWELL combine to assail us, we were completely at their mercy.

It must not be supposed that all the force abovementioned could be concentrated to repulse the enemy in case of an attack. At least one-half of the infantry force were required for special service, such as guarding trains of wagons, bridges, railroads, etc., while the cavalry were required to be continually on the scout to guard against surprise.

When your correspondent temporarily left camp at Strasburgh on the Sunday previous to the bloody affair at Front Royal, it was known that hordes of guerrillas were swarming the mountains and valleys of the north and south fork of the Shenandoah on our rear and flanks, but no indications could be obtained of any contemplated attack. Still, the very weakness of our army, would, if known to the rebel commanders, be sufficient to induce an onslaught with even equal numbers. No favorable responses having been received from Washington as to reinforcements, an officer was specially dispatched thither to lay the case before the War Deparment in person, but before completing his duties, news came of the attack at Front Royal, and, a few hours later, of the retreat of Gen. BANKS' entire army toward Maryland.

At the hotel in Front Royal, on the night of the 18th, your correspondent saw an accomplished prostitute who has figured largely in the rebel cause; and, having seen her but a short time previous at Martinsburgh, her presence at Front Royal, at a time when the rebels were surrounding it, induced suspicions that she meant mischief. She was pointed out to the military commanders there, and her arrest advised. It is now known that she was the bearer of an extensive correspondence between the rebels inside and outside of our lines. I have the following statement from an officer who participated in the battle at Front Royal:

"After you left Front Royal, BELLE BOYD made a trip to Winchester, in company with a cavalry officer. While there she was arrested by the military authorities, but, with her usual adroitness and assumed innocence, she got clear of any charge of treachery, and returned to Front Royal again. An hour previous to the attack on Col. KENLEY, BELLE went out on a rise of ground south of the town, and was seen to wave her handkerchief toward the point from which the centre of the attack was made."

Your correspondent cannot vouch for the strict accuracy of all the foregoing—but undeniable proof exists here of her treason. BELLE now reposes on her laurels in the Confederate camp.

The first intelligence of the attack on Front Royal was brought to Winchester by one of the Ira Harris Guard, and was telegraphed to Gen. BANKS, at Strasburgh, by Capt. FLAGG, Assistant Quartermaster U. S. A. But fifteen minutes elapsed after the rebels were discovered before Col. KENLEY's command was completely surrounded. The details of the murderous affair, having been published, are omitted in this letter.

The large quantities of medicines and surgeons' instruments, and hospital stores at Winchester, were destroyed by Medical Purveyor BAXTER while the enemy were in town. Dr. BAXTER passed through a storm of balls and shells, and was several times fired on from the Taylor House, where he had boarded for weeks.

COLLIS' Zouaves d'Afrique; a battalion of Ira Harris Guard, under Col. DEFORREST; Capt. HAMPTON, of the Pittsburgh Battery, a few of his men, and a small body of infantry, were cut off by the main body of the enemy, between Middletown and Winchester.

The whole force consisted of less than one thousand men. The Zouaves and cavalry had been detailed to destroy the bridges after our retreat. Capt. HAMPTON, after securing his guns, went to the rear to bring off his battery-wagon and forge. Finding their retreat cut off, they retraced the road to Strasburgh. Several times HAMPTON checked pursuit by the enemy's cavalry by mounting a stove-pipe on his carriage, and placing it in position till the infantry had passed ahead. The ruse was not discovered by the enemy. Reaching Strasburgh, this force collected thirty-five abandoned wagons loaded with commissary stores. Thence they took the mountain road North, and, by a circuitous route, came in sight of Winchester only to find themselves in the enemy's rear. Taking the road to Bath, followed by a battalion of rebel cavalry, they finally reached the Potomac, near Hancock, and reached here last night, with but small loss. On one occasion the Zouaves (only about 70 in number) kept at bay for a quarter of an hour a brigade of the enemy, and perhaps saved the whole force. The Zouaves are Gen. BANKS' Body Guard, and appear to have been well selected for such an important duty. The following is their loss: Killed, Jaques Laurier, Wm. McLane, James M. Britton; wounded, Chas. Fedelaw; missing, none. At Hancock the Zouaves found secreted, and brought off, six cases of rifles.

Less than 50 wagons, out of about 500, including many considered worthless by Gen. SHIELDS, when he left this column, have been lost; and the enemy have derived but little benefit from what was abandoned on the road. A large amount of old camp equipage, turned over to the Quartermaster, was burnt. One of the principal acquisitions by the enemy was between 600 and 1,000 European rifles, left there by Gen. SHIELDS when he joined Gen. BANKS' command. The safety of so large a portion of our transportation and stores is undoubtedly attributable to the experience of Capt. HOLAHAN, Chief Quartermaster, and Capt. BECKWITH, Chief Commissary.

Brig.-Gen. S. W. CRAWFORD, late Surgeon under ANDERSON at Fort Sumter, and afterward Inspector-General under Gen. ROSECRANS, in Western Virginia, has been appointed to the First Brigade of Gen. WILLIAMS' Division, recently commanded by Col. DONNELLY.

Messengers just report (3 P. M.) heavy firing between Harper's Ferry and Charlestown. Our pickets on the Virginia side of the Potomac, have been driven by a superior force of the enemy.

REBEL ACCOUNTS OF JACKSON'S VICTORY.

From the Richmond Examiner, Tuesday, May 27.

Gen. JACKSON'S forces entered Winchester yesterday, the 25th inst., capturing all the enemy's commissary and ordnance stores. They (the Federals) tried to burn the town, but were too closely pursued. We took the First Maryland Regiment, Col. KENLY, and the First Vermont Regiment of Cavalry at Front Royal prisoners, and 2,000 prisoners at Winchester. Our loss is 100 killed and wounded. Our troops are still in pursuit. The enemy are completely routed.

As a pendent to the foregoing the Examiner says:

"In addition to the above, we received early in the day a private dispatch, dated at Staunton, announcing the capture, by the united commands of JACKSON and EWELL, of Front Royal and Winchester, with 4,000 prisoners, and stragglers still coming in, with the enemy's stores, all accomplished at a sacrifice of one hundred men killed and wounded. The victory was regarded as very complete. Of subsequent movements and results we are without information, but we are most convinced they have been progressive."

The Examiner thus refers to the "new sensation" experienced in Richmond on the arrival of the foregoing intelligence:

"Richmond yesterday experienced a decided and wholesome feeling of elation [illegible] in view of the important and [illegible] of the glorious successes of Gen. JACK[illegible] Valley of Virginia. The spirit of [illegible] revived, and the elasticity of the public mi[illegible] spread equally among civilians and soldier[illegible] nestly hoped the achievements in the v[illegible] speedily and their counterpart nearer Ri[illegible] in the dispersion of the Yankee hosts that [illegible] from the capital of the Confederacy."

The consequences augured from the exploits of JACKSON, in the valley of the Shenandoah, are thus made a matter of speculation in the editorial of the Examiner:

"It is not yet known what results JACKSON may eliminate from the wonderful success which his bravery and long toil have fairly won at Winchester. A general expectation has prevailed among his devoted followers that he would soon lead them into Pennsylvania. LINCOLN and his comrades at Washington have been, for some time past, in mortal terror that he should rush on their own seat of sin. After his victory over MILROY, the Federal Capital was in such a state of apprehension that packing and preparation for an immediate departure were visible in all the Departments. So far as we know here in Richmond, there is now absolutely nothing to prevent JACKSON from doing either one or the other. BANKS' force was the last left capable of resisting him in that region, and, after the tremendous beating it has gotton at Winchester, it must necessarily be for some time quite ineffective. It would, indeed, be a soul-cheering thing if JACKSON should now force his way to Washington city and startle the brood of harpies settled there in wait for the carcass of the South. We may rest satisfied that this great blessing of Providence will be improved by the man to whom it has been vouchsafed. He is not one of those Generals who spend their time in camps waiting for somebody else to do something. From the time of his entrance on command up to this moment he has continually marched and fought."

FROM GEN. McCLELLAN'S ARMY.

Our Pickets Within Five and a Half Miles of Richmond—Deserters—Plenty of Food in the Rebel Army.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

LAUREL GROVE, Va., Monday, May 26, 1862.

Our troops are pressing hard upon the rebel army defending Richmond, and here, on the railroad, our pickets are within five and a half miles of the city. Yesterday—Sunday afternoon—a small force of rebels were seen approaching our lines across the Richmond turnpike, near the "Seven Pines," as if to drive in our pickets. Two brass howitzers were immediately brought into position by Gen. ——, and a few solid shot thrown over the woods at the advancing enemy, who incontinently turned and fled in the utmost haste and consternation.

Deserters are coming in every day—all of those I have seen being from a Tennessee brigade, stationed in advance of the main body of the rebel army. They represent great dissatisfaction existing among their own troops, on account of the compulsory service exacted of those whose term of enlistment has expired and of the conscripts. It is on this account that desertions are taking place, many still watching their opportunity to slip away.

Food is represented as abundant, though the variety is not great, the diet of the soldiers being limited to the two articles of salt meat and bread, no coffee or tea being procurable.

Evidences of demoralization in the rebel army accumulate. Our own men are in fine spirits, and the cool weather is favoring their health. There were signs of frost last night, and this at the close of May in Virginia. It is cool to-day, and I find an overcoat no burden.

I send with this a Richmond Examiner of Friday, the 23d, which will give you an inside view of the consternation reigning in the rebel capital, now that our army is pressing so closely upon it.

PIERREPONT.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

Two More New-York Regiments Off—Rhode-Island Regiments in Transit.

Since the commencement of the rebellion, recruiting in this City, or the State, has not been so brisk as it is at the present time. The General Order No. 31, issued by the Governor May 23, immensely facilitates it. Though no official report has been made, it is stated that the recruiting officers now in various parts of the State are very successful, volunteers flocking in upon them so readily that it is the general impression that no difficulty will be experienced in raising the new levy. It was also stated that the Twelfth Regiment enrolled yesterday as many as five hundred men. And the officers of the
